AGREE ON NEW TAX SYSTEM

CALLS BRENNAN POWER BEHIND CROWE REGIME

Reveal Legislators on Canal Pay.

An insight into the inner circles of politics was placed in the court record yesterday by the two main witnesses of the day in the sanitary district graft conspiracy trial in which Timothy J. Crowe, former president of the board of trustees during the calendar period of 1927-1928, and seven other trustees, former trustees and minor officials of the district are defendants.

Thomas D. Garry, who styled himself the confidential secretary of the late George E. Brennan, Democratic leader, told of manipulations of Brennan, which indicated that most of the officeholders were nothing more or less than his political puppets.

Tells About Legislature.

Representative R. J. Branson of Bloomington, at the morning session gave Chief Justice Harry Fisher and his associates, Judges James J. Kelly and John Prystalski, who are sitting in an advisory capacity, a story of the conditions existing in the legislature at Springfield during the session period.

Representative Branson, who was not a pay roller, told of his difficulties in trying to bring about a reformation in the legislature. It was of no avail, he said, because the non-pay rollers were so far outnumbered by the payrollers that it was useless even to suggest impeachment proceedings.

Name Brennan as Sponsor.

Garry, who during his testimony called Timothy Crowe a "big loogan," which he explained means a "big chump," tried to justify the employment in the water survey department of some 1,500 employés. He said that the large number of employés was due to the manipulations of the late Mr. Brennan and his political deals in an effort to defeat a former city administration. He said that he was sent to take charge of the department by Brennan.

Brennan Named by Witness.

Garry testified that the water survey department was the creation of Brennan and was the result of the death of the late Mayor Dever, which was blamed on his support of the water meter ordinance. Brennan had originally put over the water meter ordinance, he said, because the war department had, in its permit to the sanitary district, ordered meterization of the water. Most of this testimony was brought out by cross-examination of the witness by Attorney Albert Woll of the defense.

"Brennan whipped the aldermen into line to pass that water meter ordinance," said Garry. "He called in the aldermen and some of them said that they would be damned if they would vote for it because their constituents were against it. Brennan told them that they would be damned, that he was for the ordinance and that he would make them be for it and like it. And they did."

Garry said that the large army of employés was used to spread propaganda in favor of the meters. They were even sent into the camps of political factions to do this work. He explained that was how Democratic sanitary district employés were at work in Republican headquarters during election time. He added that it was also the purpose of this campaign to reelect the trustees to their positions.

Gets Orders from Brennan.

Garry said he took no orders from Crowe or any other trustee. He got his directions from Brennan. On this subject he testified as follows:

Q.—You say you took no orders from Crowe? A.—No, I did not. I think he is a big loogan. If he wasn't a chump he would not be here today.

Q.—What do you mean by loogan? A.—A big chump.

Q.—Please explain what you mean? A.—If he wasn't a chump you would not be a candidate for state's attorney, Mr. Northup.

Q.—I am not a candidate that I know of. Maybe you will get me up there. A.—It may be a good idea.

JUDGE KELLY.—About this propaganda you said these employés spread at the solicitation of the trustees? Did you go for the "loogan," too? A.—Yes, I went for the "loogan," too.

Set to Writing Essays.

Garry said that no trustee ever spoke to him about his department. It was operated, he said, by himself and John T. Miller, one of the defendants, under the direct orders of the late Mr. Brennan. He said that the reason none of the employés were not put under the merit system was because their loyalty to the latter plan was questioned. To

LOS ANGELES IS WAIST DEEP IN FLOOD WATERS

Five Days of Deluge Hits the Coast.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—The fifth day of steady downpour in the last seven days turned sections of Los Angeles into a flood scene. Streets ran curb deep in many sections, and in some the waters gushing down from the rim of hills which surround Los Angeles brought trolley and automobile traffic to a complete standstill.

Planks were improvised as rafts to convey school children across streets which were waist deep in water. Improvised board bridges enabled pedestrians to cross the torrents which swirled about street intersections.

In the southwest section of Los Angeles, where runoff waters ordinarily drain into Ballona creek and flow into the ocean, the water from scores of miles covered streets, sidewalks, gardens, porches, and even the lower floors of cottages for a wide area. Several families were marooned and telephoned for removal by boat.

Almost Drowns in Street.

Firemen were kept busy pumping water out of flooded store and warehouse basements, and city highway crews were in constant demand to shovel the results of minor landslides off streets in Hollywood, Whitley Heights, and Eagle Rock.

James Gott, 72, was almost drowned when struck by an automobile and knocked into a flooded gutter at 10th and Main streets in downtown Los Angeles. Before help could reach him he was completely immersed in the torrent. He was revived after respiratory treatment at police hospital.

Two were killed and 140 persons reported treated at emergency hospitals for injuries received in automobile accidents during the storm.

All trains on the southern division o. the Southern Pacific railroad were delayed for hours by washouts between this city and San Luis Obispo, where roads and homes, as well as highways, were undermined and ruined.

Santa Barbara reported two boats sunk, and piers and other boats, as well as highways and houses, damaged by the high waters on land and sea.

Children Boat to School.

Long Beach, Cal., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—School children used rowboats to get to school in portions of this city today. Others who had business which took them out of their homes provided patronage for an improvised ferry system, and a heavy rainfall and collection of runoff waters flooded considerable portions of Long Beach.

State street presented the strange spectacle of policemen in dories transporting shoppers across streets and from store to store.

Flood waters pouring down from the heights of Signal hill marooned families over a large area. North and south of State street for a distance of fourteen blocks from Gundry to Cherry street homes had six inches of water covering their lower floors.

Storm Halts Traffic.

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Although it did not rain here, one of the heaviest rain and snow storms in years left some parts of California flooded and snowbound today. Train and airplane service over the Sierra came to a standstill. The storm was felt to some degree over nearly all the Pacific slope.

No word had been received today from the ten persons marooned at the Primrose gold mine near Sierra City. Efforts to reach them were blocked by a blizzard.

The heaviest rain of the season swept southern California.

Snow at Norden, Cal., was 181 inches deep. Of that 46 inches fell during the night. At Soda Springs it was 130 inches deep. At Truckee it was 85 inches.

An aerial survey of the Pajaro river valley showed 5,000 acres of agricultural land inundated. The town of Pajaro was flooded to a depth ranging from six inches to three feet.

4½ Inches Rain.

Watsonville was flooded. At San Luis Obispo, Cal., 4½ inches of rain fell yesterday and last night, flooding lowlands. Paso Robles also was partly flooded.

Avalanches of snow, rock and dirt at Eder, 10 miles from Truckee, and another near Cisco tore out several hundred feet of Southern Pacific railroad tracks and snow sheds, stopping trains on both sides of the snow buried Sierra.

Eastbound trains stopped at Sacramento and Colfax. Westbound trains,

Jacoby Quits Lenz' Bridge Match in Huff

New York, Dec. 29.—[Tuesday.]—(AP)—The contract bridge team of Sidney S. Lenz and Oswald Jacoby parted in a dispute this morning after they had taken 250 points off the lead of Mr. and Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Although the Culbertsons won five of eight rubbers they suffered heavily in sets, Culbertson once going down 1,400 points when doubled and vulnerable. The series rubber standing became 59 for Culbertson and 44 for Lenz, Culbertson ending the fourteenth session with a plus of 16,340.

Jacoby's bombshell came as the last rubber was being played. Just prior to his announcement of his resignation there was a heated discussion between the partners. Lenz criticized a play made by Jacoby, who retorted that Lenz had made several errors in his play.

Referee Forces Play.

Jacoby announced he was through "right now." The referee said the contract of the contest provided he must end the night's play.

Jacoby stood for a moment, uncertain. Then he sat down and made his cut without another word.

Mrs. Culbertson was back in the match after a holiday vacation and once acted as peacemaker between Lenz and Jacoby in one of their many discussions of the session over bids and playing.

"Darling, don't you know what happens when you interfere in a family quarrel?" asked Culbertson.

New Partner Tonight.

Lenz declared he would be on hand with a new partner in time to begin play tonight. But he refused to name his new partner. He was asked if Commander Winfield Liggett Jr. was being considered.

"Is there a possibility that Mr. Jacoby and you will patch up your difference and that he will return to the game?"

"There is not!" he replied. "Our style of bidding just doesn't seem to fit. Mr. Jacoby promised me he would not bid psychics and continued to bid them. I never knew what he was doing."

Jacoby said that early in the session Lenz bid six spades on an impossible hand and then, when he was set, said to his partner, "What are you bidding on?"

"I've had a marvelous time and regret this end to it," Jacoby said. "I cannot go on being publicly criticized by Mr. Lenz, especially when the criticisms are to cover up errors of his own."

Play of the Night.

When play started the Culbertsons were 17,090 points ahead, with 95 rubbers past. Progress of the play was as follows:

Rubber 96—Three hands; won by Lenz; Culberson now plus 16,030.

Rubber 97—Nine hands; won by Culbertson; Culbertson now plus 16,325.

Rubber 98—Seven hands; won by Culbertson; Culbertson now plus 17,335.

Rubber 99—Six hands; won by Lenz; Culbertson now plus 15,950.

Rubber 101—Eight hands; won by Lenz; Culbertson now plus 14,720.

Rubber 102—Seven hands; won by Culberson; Culbertson now plus 16,130.

BANKER ACCUSES WIFE OF KICKING HIM IN THE FACE

Melville S. Newcomb, assistant vice president of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company, charged yesterday that his wife, Kathryn, kicked him in the face in a quarrel in their home at 315 16th street, Wilmette. The allegation was embodied in a bill for divorce filed in the Superior court. Newcomb charged cruelty, asserting that this wife struck and kicked him without provocation while they were visiting at the home of a friend on Dec. 22. The following day they parted, according to the bill, which says the couple were married on June 16, 1920, at White Plains, N. Y., and have a son, Reed, 9 years old.

Found Shot and Burned Beside Flaming Auto

Stanley J. Hall, 31 years old, Dartmouth college graduate and bank employé, was found unconscious last night beside his burning automobile in a prairie near Crawford and Payne street, Evanston. He had been severely burned and there was a bullet wound in the back of his neck. Nearby was a pistol with three empty cartridges in it.

At the Evanston hospital Hall declined to give his name, saying in a spirit of braggadocio that he was "Tony the Wop," and that the shooting and burning had been done by gangsters.

"But," he added, "it was all my fault."

Auto License Bares Identity.

The Indiana license number on the car was traced, however, and it was found that it was issued to S. J. Hall of the Spencer hotel, Marion, Ind. A note, indicating that Hall may have attempted to commit suicide, also was discovered. It was signed "Stan," and this clew caused investigators to go to Hall's home at 2608 Eastwood avenue, Evanston.

There a policeman, unaware of the accident, was guarding the house. He had been placed there, he said, by Attorney Henry E. Cutler, father of Hall's wife, to prevent Hall from kidnaping his own young son, Joseph.

Mr. Cutler, who lives at 407 Central avenue, Wilmette, confirmed this. He said that Hall had been something like a model youth until a few months ago, when he began to drink.

Hall is traveling representative in Indiana for the Continental-Illinois Bank and Trust company.

"He has been wild and has threatened to take the child from my daughter," he continued. "The guard was put on the house to prevent this. He is Tony the Wop; that was his nickname at Dartmouth."

Theory of Police.

The police advanced a theory that Hall, despondent over his troubles, decided to kill himself and tried to make it appear that he had been a victim of gangsters. Possibly the frustration of his plan to kidnap the boy added to his despondency, it was held.

Hall's note read:

"This is cruel, but there is no alternative. I believe I am right in taking Joe. Get him away before Dibs returns. Wire the girls it was in an auto-train affair, as Dad must not know and it must be kept from him. Everything is in good shape financially and the insurance trust at the bank will provide for Dibs and eventually for the girls. STAN."

No Higher Tax Upon Incomes Below $5,000

Washington, D. C., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—A Democratic tax program which probably will leave the rates on incomes under $5,000 much as they now are and which may hoist the levies on the incomes of the rich to warthie levels was nearing completion today.

Out of conferences between Democratic leaders in congress word came that the following proposals also were being considered:

That there shall be no sales tax, or at the most a very limited one on luxury articles only.

That in order to prevent evasion of taxation through the sale of securities at the present depreciated values the capital gains and losses provisions be repealed.

That the new schedule be made retroactive as to 1931 incomes.

From the White House came word that the President was ready to support any congressional move which would result in cutting government expenditures with the reservation that such cuts do not impair the vital functions of the government.

Arbitrary Slice in Expenses.

From authoritative sources it was learned that several influential members of congress have discussed a proposal to initiate an arbitrary cut of perhaps 10 per cent in all departments, leaving it to department heads to figure out where the pruning would hurt the least.

The administration was reported as agreeing that the three departments which major slashes must be aimed are the army, navy, and the postoffice.

Talk of increasing the first class postal rate from 2 to 2½ or 3 cents an ounce became more pronounced.

At the same time it became increasingly apparent that bills to liberalize the veterans' bonus laws still further will have harder sledding than did last season's bonus measure.

Mellon's Plan Hard Hit.

The program on which the congressional Democrats are working is in many respects diametrically opposed to that put forward by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. One of the fundamentals of the secretary's plan was a broadening of the tax base, and he contemplated a maximum surtax of 40 per cent. The Democratic plan, as now conceived, means letting the small incomes alone and boosting the maximum surtax to perhaps 60 or 65 per cent.

One Democratic house member took occasion today to point out that on the basis of past revisions, an increase in the lower brackets might net an extra twenty millions from 3,000,000 persons, while an increase in the upper bracket would raise the same amount at the expense of 67 people.

On One Item Agreed.

The congressional Democrats and the administration are described as being of one mind on the necessity of repealing the provisions relating to capital profit and loss. Otherwise, it is argued, securities holders might evade taxation by selling a portion of their holdings, repurchasing them later at a market still more depressed by their sale.

The Democratic leadership took occasion to explain that the repeal probably would be made retroactive so that taxpayers would gain nothing by selling prior to the act's passage.

Following a meeting between Speaker Garner and Senator Harrison today it was announced that the joint Democratic policy committee of the two houses would go into session immediately upon the reconvening of congress, with the expectation that the tax legislation would be through the house early in February.

GOVERNOR AND COUNTY HEAD TO PICK ASSESSOR

Compromise Is Put Up to Legislators.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Substantial accord was reached yesterday at the conference headed by Gov. Emmerson and Mayor Cermak which was called for the purpose of agreeing on a plan for the reconstruction of the taxing system of Cook county.

Twenty officials, legislators, Chicago business leaders and newspaper heads consulted behind closed doors in Gov. Emmerson's suite at the Stevens hotel for more than three hours. Then it was announced that the plan approved by the majority provides for a hitherto unsuggested method of selecting the taxing officials to replace the present board of assessors and board of review.

This plan proposes that the governor and the president of the county board shall agree upon the single assessor and that there shall be two reviewers, one of whom is to be chosen by the governor, and the other by the president of the county board.

D. F. Kelly Announces Plan.

The formal announcement by D. F. Kelly, chairman of the citizens' tax warrant sale committee, left the implication plain that there had been no final commitment of all the individuals present attempted, but that the majority had indorsed the new compromise as the one most acceptable.

The proposal now goes to a committee created last week at a caucus of Cook county legislators. That committee will meet in the finance committee room of the county board at 10 o'clock this morning. If approval is voted there a favorable committee report will be submitted to a second meeting of the Cook county delegation in the assembly next Saturday morning.

In the meantime Mayor Cermak contemplates presenting the plan to the city council for indorsement at its meeting this afternoon. He also expects to summon all the Democratic senators and representatives from Cook county to a meeting with the Democratic managing committee, where he will urge indorsement of the revised bill.

Sets Aside Party Politics.

"As I have said so frequently," the mayor remarked as he left the Stevens hotel, "the situation is so acute that partisan consideration must be set aside. My associates and I have done so."

A political analysis of the results of the adoption of the amended plan is simple. The politicians say that if it becomes a law they would expect two of the present board of review to be appointed under the new plan. They would be Charles V. Barrett, Republican, who, it was suggested, would be named by Gov. Emmerson, and Edward J. Hughes, considered the likely choice of President Emmett Whealan of the county board.

Forecasts concerning the choosing of the assessor were more difficult. The choice would be made jointly by Gov. Emmerson and President Whealan.

Hope for Business Man Assessor.

In making the official announcement for the conferees, Mr. Kelly said that the hope expressed had been that a "competent, hard headed business man" would be selected for the most important of the three positions.

In a general way at least this compromise was considered a concession by Mayor Cermak, but he and his associates gained ground in another important matter. The Republicans have been insisting upon the retention of thirty township assessors in the country towns as provided for in the amendment passed by the state senate under the leadership of Richard J. Barr of Joliet.

The ground gained in this matter was an agreement that the country town deputies be placed under the complete control of the chief assessor and subject to rules and regulations laid down by him. This, it was said, would give him complete jurisdiction over their books and provide for uniform assessments throughout the county minus the inequalities among the townships.

Provides for Election in 1934.

The Cermak concessions, it also was said, were politically possible because the proposed revised bill will provide for the election of all three of the new officials in 1934. The three appointees would serve only during the present emergency, subject to election or replacement approximately three years from now unless the legislature in that three years modifies the law.

It also was definitely agreed at the conference that the assessor should not sit with the two reviewers in passing upon complaints of his own work. He or his staff will be called on to defend his figures but he will not have a vote in such matters.

This is considered an improvement over the proposal of the governor's tax conference for a board of three to hear complaints, the assessor to be one of the trio.

Officials at the Conference.

The officials in the Stevens conference in addition to Gov. Emmerson and Mayor Cermak were President Wheelan and Commissioner of Public Works Sprague. The legislators were Senators Barr and Arthur W. Husbeck, Republicans, and Thomas J. Courtney, Democratic leader of the upper house, and Speaker Shanahan and Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg, Republicans, and Representatives Michael L. Igoe and Arthur Roe of Vandalia, Democrats.

Associated with Mr. Kelly were three other men identified with Mayor Cermak's advisory organizations: Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank; James Simpson of the Chicago Plan commission, and Sewell Avery, chairman of the mayor's standing advisory committee. Mr. Traylor left soon after the conference started.

Governor Bows to Majority.

"I should like to add," said Mr. Kelly in making the press announcement, "that Gov. Emmerson is greatly reluctant to take part in the naming of local officials because he always has been in favor of home rule. And it is in deference to the wishes of a majority of those present here that he has consented to the presentation of this plan to the legislators tomorrow.

"One other point we wish to emphasize. That is that the entire group here is convinced that the legislature has been extremely patient and has done all that could be expected of it up to this time.

"Another definite opinion that was voiced here is the belief that large taxpayers who have not been paying their bills should go in and pay them without further delay."

In answer to questions Mr. Kelly said that none of the other bills pending before the special session was taken up in the conference.

MAYOR PROPOSES TO SAVE JOBS OF 2,000 WORKERS

Plan to Be Presented to Aldermen Today.

Mayor Cermak will submit a proposal to the finance committee of the city council today which is expected to eliminate the necessity of laying off more than 2,000 city employés on Jan. 1 and which, perhaps, will keep them working for the entire year of 1932 while still reducing city expenditures.

The proposal, as explained briefly at a night session of the committee, is to "stagger" employment in city jobs. Although the number of positions in the city service will be reduced to keep expenditures within the estimate of 1932 revenues, the same number of employés as is now on the pay rolls will be retained.

Plan of Employment.

These employés will share in the positions. In each department the department head and employés will work out a scheme of carrying on the city's business efficiently with each employé taking a voluntary layoff of a few days each month and some other employé doing the work and receiving the pay during his absence.

An illustration of the manner in which the plan will be worked out was given by Ald. Jacob M. Arvey [24th], one of a subcommittee of three which talked over the proposal with the mayor before the meeting. He said:

"In the license department there are now sixty-five positions, but the mayor's advisory commission has recommended a reduction of fifteen jobs. We will appropriate for only fifty jobs, but will retain the sixty-five employés, letting them share the work and the salaries."

Put Before Committee.

The proposal was laid before the committee as the aldermen were discussing the "continuation ordinance" which authorizes department heads to spend money during the period between Jan. 1 and the passage of the annual appropriation bill. The issue had been whether to retain during that period the number of employés as of Dec. 31, or to put into effect immediately the economy proposals in the tentative budget. Action on the ordinance was postponed until today to permit the mayor to explain his proposal to the committee.

Earlier in the session Irwin "Bosco" Knott, head of local No. 9 of the electrical workers, had criticized the tentative budget, declaring that it was "rotten and a frameup" and charging that it would destroy the morale in the department of gas and electricity. He said that the men in his union to be laid off are not the ones most recently added to the city pay roll, a condition that the mayor's plan will eliminate.

Expert Meets Critic.

The aldermen found an amusing interlude at the end of Knott's speech, in which he had criticized J. L. Jacobs, efficiency expert. "Let me introduce Jacobs to you," said Ald. Thomas J. O'Grady [14th]. "He is sitting right behind you."

"I'm pleased to meet you," said Knott as he shook Jacobs' hand, "but what I said still stands."

Another proposal considered by the committee was to continue the man power as of December, but fill no vacancies, continue the ordinance of last summer which abolished a number of jobs in the health department and city collector's and controller's offices, and continue the ordinance which deducted 14 days' pay from each employé during the last six months. A saving equal to the one proposed in the tentative budget could be made in this manner, the aldermen contended.

County Commissioners to Keep Jacobs on Pay Roll; Buy Milk at Excess Prices

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

In two hours of discussion and action the county commissioners, sitting as the finance committee, indicated yesterday there is no pressing necessity for cutting the cost of government beyond the 12 or 13 per cent they had previously planned.

The commissioners talked much about economy but voted to pay—on the face of the bids—an excess cost of about $6,000 for milk during the next three months.

They held a heated discussion on a proposal to discharge J. L. Jacobs, efficiency expert who has initiated most of the board's savings in expense during the last nine years. Finally they voted to retain Mr. Jacobs, but will ask him to cut his compensation 15 per cent.

Jacobs' Fate Taken Up.

"Every one says we must economize," said Commissioner George A. Miller in starting the attack on Jacobs. "Mr. Jacobs' work has been good and we should keep him until after the budget is made. Then we will not have much for him to do. He is doing the same work as the county auditor and we should eliminate the overlapping services. We should not go off half cocked in rehiring him."

"I think we should retain him," interposed President Emmett Whealan. "He performs very valuable service for the county."

"What is his particular function?" asked Mrs. Edward J. Fleming. "Is he an efficiency expert or a policeman? He has been working for nine years and the results seem rather negligible."

"He has saved the county from bankruptcy for the last five years," retorted President Whealan.

"Why hasn't he eradicated some of the evils in the last nine years?" persisted Mrs. Fleming. "What need is there for the commissioners if he does all the work?"

"I sometimes doubt the need of the commissioners," shot back Whealan.

"I am willing to accept my responsibility and do my tasks," said Mrs. Fleming. "If the president needs Mr. Jacobs, let the president pay for him. The county is just as broke as if it had not had Mr. Jacobs."

County Doesn't Adopt Plans.

"The trouble is that the board does not adopt Mr. Jacobs' recommendations," said Miss Amelia Sears. "He has given nine years of intelligent service."

"It would be a grave mistake not to employ Jacobs," said Commissioner William Busse. "He is very valuable to the board and the taxpayers. His compensation, however, should be reduced 15 per cent, just like other county employés."

That idea was adopted, and then came a consideration of bids on milk for the Oak Forest infirmary, jail, county hospital, and juvenile home. The Wagner Dairy company was the low bidder on all four contracts.

Finds Dairy Meets Tests.

Regarding this bid, Frank Chambers, superintendent of public service, reported to the commissioners: "He has a modern up to date plant, inspected and passed every two weeks by the Chicago health department. Plant has a capacity of 385 gallons a day, and he has 36 wagons and trucks.

"During the last year he has supplied milk to Dunning, the Illinois Research hospital, Eye, Ear and Nose hospital, and the Hines hospital. His milk has been tested for both bacteria and butter fat and his cows for tuberculosis. The city health department reports that he has passed all of these tests."

The Cook county milk producers pleaded that the board should award the contract to "home industry." The Wagner company, which has a Cicero plant, sells milk from Indiana farms. So the board awarded the contract for Oak Forest to the Capitol dairy at 26⅞ cents a gallon, instead of to Wagner at his bid of 30 cents.

Jail Contract Awarded.

The jail contract was given to the William Quigley company at 30 cents a gallon instead of to Wagner at 23 cents. The City Sanitary Milk company was given the juvenile home contract at 26 cents, while Wagner's bid was 23. The hospital contract was given to Capitol at 27½ cents instead of to Wagner at 23 cents.

Commissioner Kavanagh and Miss Sears voted against the awards, while the others present voted for them. These institutions require about 1,030 gallons of milk daily. The milk at the low bids would have been $5,985 less cost, or about 16 per cent cheaper. The arguments against awarding the contracts to the Wagner company were based on its financial responsibility and its ability to supply milk in quantities called for by the contract.

LINER RUSHED TO SAVE BOY VICTIM OF APPENDICITIS

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 23.—[Special.]—With the life of 5 year old George Robert Ludwig at stake, the Baltimore mail line steamer City of Havre raced into Norfolk today from Hamburg and Havre eighteen hours ahead of her schedule.

Young Ludwig was stricken with appendicitis Friday night while the vessel was many miles at sea. The ship's doctor feared to perform an operation because of unfavorable weather, the ship at the time rolling heavily in high seas.

The officers gave orders to rush the vessel to port at full speed. An ambulance met the boat and the boy was taken to Sarah Leigh hospital, where his appendix was removed.

The little patient is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Ludwig of Iowa, who were passengers returning from a visit to Germany.

TRUSTEES PRUNE $1,790,000 FROM SCHOOL EXPENSE

But They're a Long Way from Balanced Budget.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The school board's subcommittee on appropriations decided yesterday in two long sessions to eliminate about $1,790,000 from the 1932 budget. While the amount appears large, the subcommittee made meager progress toward a balanced budget in the educational account.

The board must prune more than $3,000,000 out of that fund in order to make the estimated income meet the proposed expense. In three weeks the board has trimmed out about one-sixteenth of that amount. The savings yesterday were largely in the building, free textbook and playground funds. The larger items eliminated were for repairs, improvements and equipment. Less than a fifth of the $1,790,000 total saving was in the educational fund.

Defer Action on Normal.

When the subcommittee—Trustees Joseph P. Savage, Walter H. Brandenburg and William D. McJunkin, with President Myers as an ex-officio member—arrived at the controversial subjects of suspending the Normal college and the Crane college for one year, action was deferred.

Superintendent Bogan suggested in the interest of economy at the Normal college that $24,000 could be saved on teachers, $30,000 by the elimination of its summer school and $8,500 on text books, a total of $62,500 out of $425,000 total expense.

"Your figures show that you have turned out 1,611 teachers in a little more than two years," said President Myers, "and we have no work for them. This looks like a place where we can save some money."

"We will have a shortage of teachers in two or three years," argued Mr. Bogan, "and we require a large number of teachers for substitute work."

He suggested that the students admitted for a year be limited to half the usual number. Trustee Brandenburg suggested that no pupils be admitted.

When the proposed $670,000 appropriation for Crane college was reached, Superintendent Bogan explained that Crane was barred from the list of accredited colleges about two years ago, principally because of overcrowded classes; that upon his appeal certain requirements for reinstatement were made.

"The college, one of the finest of its kind in the country, has been reinstated but all of the conditions have not been complied with," said Mr. Bogan. "I do not think there is anything that can be eliminated from the college budget which will not violate the rules of the association."

"They couldn't put the trustees in jail if they closed down the college," commented Brandenburg.

"Here is a supervisor of activities and publications," said President Myers. "There are seven deans. Why would not five or six do?"

J. Leonard Hancock, president of Crane, made a plea for "the college of the poor boys." He said that nine-tenths of his students could not get a college course except at Crane.

"I believe that more than half of them could," replied Trustee Savage. "We bar out some boys and admit others. In an institution conducted at public expense that is wrong."

"To me it is a wonderful institution, and I'd hate to see it close," said Trustee McJunkin.

Savage suggested that the committee ask the views of Dr. Henry Morrison of the University of Chicago and Dr. Herbert Simpson of Northwestern university. Superintendent Bogan suggested that the views of Charles H. Judd of the University of Chicago and A. R. Hatton of Northwestern be also obtained.

GLENCOE SCHOOLS TO STAY CLOSED, OFFICIAL SAYS

Following a meeting last night of a citizens' committee in Glencoe, it was announced by Homer F. Horton, president of the village board of education, that the Glencoe schools would not be opened until money for their upkeep had been collected in taxes.

"We are not going to get into any trouble like Chicago's," he said. "The closing of the schools here is due to failure of taxpayers to pay and there is no chance of a reopening next week."

A mass meeting of citizens is to be held at the Central school building next Sunday afternoon. Suggested plans that may permit a reopening will be discussed. The session last night was attended by twenty-five members and by James A. Russell, president of the village board.

TEACHERS GET PETITIONS READY FOR ASSEMBLY

In an effort to spur the general assembly to some action that will insure the Chicago public schools against closing next month, teacher organizations yesterday were preparing 500,000 petitions which are to be circulated when the legislature reconvenes on Jan. 5. The petitions are to be circulated by school children among their parents and will be available for other citizens' signatures at department stores and other centers.

Gov. Emmerson, Mayor Cermak and President Lewis E. Myers of the school board have been invited to address the mass meeting which the teacher groups are sponsoring at the Stadium on the night of Jan. 4. Fred Atkins Moore, executive director of the Chicago Forum, is to be the chairman, according to Attorney Allan J. Carter, spokesman for the teacher groups. Other speakers are to include James Mullenbach, Victor Olander, Irving A. Wilson, and Mrs. Holland Flagler.

RAILWAY UNIONS REPORTED READY FOR 10% PAY CUT

May Accept the Reduction Effective on Jan. 16.

Railway labor may accept a 10 per cent reduction in wages effective about Jan. 16, according to a report in Chicago railroad circles yesterday. Based on the 1930 pay roll, this would mean a saving to the roads of about $255,000,000 annually. The number of employes has been reduced since Jan. 1, 1931, however, which would lessen the saving somewhat.

Representatives of the twenty-one railroad unions who met recently in Chicago will open a brief session in Cleveland today to decide on a date for a general meeting on wage reductions between the Railway Labor Executives' association and a committee of the Association of Railway Executives headed by Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio. The general meeting is to be held in Chicago. All grand lodge officers and general chairmen of the unions will attend.

Meeting Expected on Jan. 14.

It was said yesterday that the meeting probably will take place here on Jan. 14, when the unions may agree to take the 10 per cent wage cut, effective at once. The roads already have served formal notice on the general chairmen of the unions that they are asking a 15 per cent reduction. It was said, however, that the railway presidents indicated the 15 per cent request would be withdrawn upon acceptance of the 10 per cent cut.

Information received here from Montreal was to the effect that Canadian unions would accept a 10 per cent reduction without further opposition immediately following such action by the American unions. The Canadian railroad workers have been balking at taking the 10 per cent reduction recommended by the railway conciliation board.

Union Split Is Hinted.

An important phase of the union situation is reported to be a growing opposition within the four big brotherhoods—Locomotive Engineers, Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Railway Conductors, and Railway Trainmen—to break away from the Railway Labor Executives' association and to carry on alone.

It was explained that the four brotherhoods object to "carrying the load" for the so-called general unions. Many of the unions represented in the executive's association have memberships on some roads and not on others. The four brotherhoods are said to be opposed to getting into various differences that may arise in which they have no interest.

This question was raised at a meeting of Illinois Central members of the engineers' brotherhood last Saturday night. A majority of those attending favored letting Alvaney Johnston, grand chief of the brotherhood, make a decision as to the course to be followed.

Sargent Action Explained.

North Western railway officials explained yesterday that the action of President Fred Sargent in agreeing not to put into effect at this time a wage reduction for maintenance of way employes was taken at the request of national union officials to avoid any untoward incidents before the general conference here. Mr. Sargent restored the status of the controversy to that existing on Nov. 30 as a conciliatory measure.

The maintenance of way workers had taken a strike vote in which it was reported a majority had favored stopping work if the wage reduction was enforced.

Among the officials of unions having headquarters in Chicago who departed for Cleveland last night were Jesse W. Jewell, president of the railway employes department of the American Federation of Labor; and O. E. Braese, vice president of the American Train Dispatchers' association.

DECLARE LOWER WAGES WILL AID BUILDING TRADES

Landis Award Group Reduces Scale.

Steps to encourage a resumption of building activity in the Chicago area are going forward, with a wage reduction commensurate with reduction in material costs as the chief motivation under consideration.

The Landis Award Employers' association yesterday took the lead with the announcement of an adjustment in wages paid laborers and building mechanics working on Landis award projects. The new scale pays building mechanics $1 an hour, as compared with the previous scale of $1.25 an hour. The new scale for laborers is 70 cents an hour, as compared with the old scale of 82.5 cents. The new scale becomes effective at once.

Step to More Employment.

"This adjustment," said the association's announcement, "will make the cost of building construction commensurate with the general commodity prices and should increase the demand for construction, thus promoting employment."

According to Oscar W. Rosenthal, president of the Builders' Association of Chicago, the construction industry throughout the United States is operating at only 20 per cent of its capacity. Programs for modernizing homes and other buildings will solve the depression in the building industry, he said.

Five major projects of this nature have been put under way in Chicago in the last two months. They are the Leiter building, $750,000; the Loft buildings at 210 Jackson boulevard, 308 Jackson boulevard, and Quincy and Wells streets, respectively $300,000, $150,000, $100,000; and the Market building, Sunnyside avenue and Broadway, $100,000.

"Repairs Will Turn the Tide."

"Construction of this nature on a large scale can and will turn the business tide," says the bulletin of the Building Construction Employers' association. "The amount of needed repairs on all types of buildings is such that if attended to at once a great many men will be put to work."

The 1931 financial volume of building permits issued in Chicago is one of the smallest since 1918, figures prepared by the contractors' association show. In 1918 the permits totaled $34,000,000. The 1931 total will be less than $50,000,000, as compared to $79,000,000 in 1930. Ordinarily Chicago rates second to New York in building activity, but in October and November of this year it was fifteenth in the list.

DROP IMPEACHMENT PROCEEDING AGAINST SOUTH BEND MAYOR

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—Impeachment charges against Mayor W. R. Hinkle instituted by former City Controller Rudolph Ackermann, whom the mayor discharged, were dropped by the city council tonight, without having heard a word of evidence for or against the city's chief executive.

A week ago the council on a tie vote blundered into a legal impasse. Councilman Glenn Oakley, Republican, who promised to try to extricate the council from legal barricades, announced tonight that he did not wish to change his vote. The tie vote of a week ago had quashed the charges.

When the meeting adjourned tonight, Ackermann issued a statement, intimating that further steps would be taken to press the charges. The law in Indiana provides for impeachment and removal by grand jury as well as by council.

Mayor Hinkle and Albert M. Long, Republican members of the board of safety, had been accused by Ackermann of permitting gambling, trying to trade some privately owned tractors to a Wisconsin implement firm for city equipment contracts, and of altering the board of safety records to show that Harry E. Hinkle, brother of the mayor, had been appointed assistant fire chief.

AT LAST, A TEST TO DECIDE WHEN ONE IS WOOZY

The problem of the drunken driver has been taken up by the Scientific Crime Detection Laboratory of Northwestern university, at 469 E. Ohio street, and a standardized test is being prepared to determine the exact degree of intoxication of automobile drivers who have been in accidents, Dr. C. W. Muehlberger, the assistant director, said last night.

Dr. Muehlberger, who is also county toxicologist, is an expert on poisons. He was adressing a group of 300 teachers of law from 71 colleges, who opened the annual meeting of the Association of American Law schools yesterday at the Drake hotel.

"We have never before considered the intoxicated person as a poisoned person, but he most assuredly is," he said. "Aided by work done along these lines in Great Britain, we are formulating a series of blood and other tests of bodily contents by means of which we will be able to tell exactly to what extent a person has been drinking. We expect this to be of incalculable benefit, because of the inaccurate methods of diagnosis by observation now employed."

WARRANT ISSUED FOR DOCTOR.

The $2,500 bond of Dr. William White, physician with offices at 803 East 61st street, was forfeited and a capias issued for his arrest yesterday by Judge Alfar M. Eberhardt in the Felony court when he failed to appear in court to answer a charge of abortion.

ARREST SHERIFF FOR COMPLICITY IN BANK ROBBERY

Two Bandits Given 20 Years in Prison.

Hartford City, Ind., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Ira Barton, sheriff of Blackford county, was placed under arrest tonight on charges said by local police to accuse him of complicity in recent bank robberies at Hartford City, Montpelier and Dunkirk, Ind.

No formal charge had been entered against him early tonight.

Arrested by Coroner.

The arrest was made by Coroner W. W. Ayres, who said he acted on information from authorities at Portland, Ind., and from the state bureau of criminal identification.

Barton denied any implication in the bank robberies and said the charges were a "frameup." He would not amplify this comment. Barton's term as sheriff ends Jan. 1.

Two men who participated in the Christmas eve robbery of the First State bank at Dunkirk, in which $1,000 was obtained, were sentenced at Portland today to 20 years in prison each.

Third Withholds Plea.

The two sentenced were Albert Frabotta, alias Frank Trelaetta, and Frank Valentino, alias Lawrence Appoteill, both from Chicago Heights. A third man held as a member of the gang, Lorenz Capeill of Steger, Ill., withheld his plea. Authorities were continuing efforts to identify a fourth man, killed by the bullets of vigilantes.

Before his election as sheriff two years ago, Barton was a prominent farmer in this county, owning farm lands north of Hartford City. He is about 40 years old.

LISTS WIFE'S 47 COMMANDMENTS IN DIVORCE PLEA

She Drew Them Up, Asked Him to Sign.

Camden, N. J., Dec. 28.—[Special]—In an attempt to "rescue" her marriage by placing it "on a business basis," Mrs. Rebecca Ross, a school teacher at Teaneck, devised a list of forty-seven "commandments" which she requested her husband, Albert K. Ross, an accountant, of Gloucester, to sign and obey, it was testified here today before William J. Kraft, an advisory master in chancery.

Mrs. Ross, the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. J. Stockton Roddy, of Gloucester, is seeking annulment of her marriage, which took place in November, 1929. Her husband is a recent graduate of the University of Pennsylvania.

After admitting that she had written her husband a letter last June containing the stipulations upon which she would return to him, Mrs. Ross testified that she no longer loved him, "because he contested this action for annulment."

A Wife's Commandments.

Among the conditions she drew up for her husband's signature were the following:

"That you will attend all church services regularly.

"Will refrain from criticising my family.

"Will finish your course in accounting at the university.

"That we will have no children, for at least two years.

"You will guarantee to increase your salary so that at 50 you will earn $10,000 a year.

"That all moneys you give to me may be used as I please without question by you. I shall receive a portion of your salary and be paid a salary as cook and housekeeper.

"One evening a week to be reserved for ourselves without entertainment or accepting invitations.

One Evening to Relatives.

"One evening to be given over to entertaining our relatives.

"You will be gentle with me in all personal relations, never forcing attentions upon me in a brutal or cruel manner.

"That you will not be unreasonable in our marital relations.

"That you may never divorce me under any conditions without my consent.

"That I shall have the free right of telephoning and communication with my family.

"That during our hours from each other there shall never have to be an accounting of where we have been.

"We shall both be free to come and go as we desire.

"Relatives will not be permitted to interfere in our home life.

"That you will treat my family well and never try to separate me from them.

"That is either of us breaks these conditions the other shall have the right to appeal to the lawyer who draws them up and shall be fined for such offense.

"That upon three infractions of these conditions the other will have the right to break the marriage up and the offender must pay all costs of a divorce.

"And that these conditions be drawn up in legal form and signed by both parties."

ROBBER KILLS MERCHANT FOR AN EMPTY TILL

Woman and Girl See Slaying in Store.

While a woman and a little girl looked on last evening a robber shot and killed Joseph Rose, 49 years old, in his tiny shoe store at 1420 West Roosevelt road because he had no money to give up.

Mrs. Dorothy Zimmer, 328 South Homan avenue, and 11 year old Miriam Ruttenberg, 1538 Roosevelt road, were the witnesses to the shooting. They had entered the store together and Mrs. Zimmer was being fitted to a pair of shoes when a tall man, possibly a confederate of the one who did the killing, arrived.

Two Robbers Walk In.

He asked to be shown galoshes of a large size. Rose told him he had none and the tall man walked out. Less than a minute later two young men, well dressed and of dark complexion, entered. One held a pistol in his right hand.

He walked up to Rose and spoke:

"Your money or your life."

Rose, who had been trying a shoe on the foot of Mrs. Zimmer, stood up.

"I can't give you money," he said. "I haven't any."

Shoots Merchant Twice.

The robber, with the pistol pressed against the abdomen of the merchant, fired twice. Mrs. Zimmer screamed and rose from the bench on which she was sitting. The man fired at her once and she seized the Ruttenberg girl and ran to a rear room. Both robbers fled.

When the police arrived Rose was lying on the floor, dead. A search disclosed that he had no money in his pockets and none in the cash drawer.

Another shoe store owner, Joseph Garstkiewicz, 62 years old, 3035 Milwaukee avenue, was shot when he was slow in complying with the demand of an armed man that he put up his hands. At the Lutheran Deaconess hospital it was found that the bullet had glanced on Garstkiewicz's rib and that the wound was not serious. The bandit fled without loot.

THIS DEPRESSION PROBLEM FIXED BY SMALL BOYS

Quincy, Ill., Dec. 28.—(AP)—The depression ended today as far as Bobby Hardy, 5, and his younger brother were concerned.

"Have you any floors we can scrub?" they asked Police Clerk Jack Pottle at city hall.

"Why?" said Pottle.

"Well, we got a dog," they explained, "but no dollar for a license."

The boys got the job. Their dog got a license.

MRS. DU PONT, FLYING PLANE, HURT IN CRASH

New York, Dec. 28.—[Special.]—Mrs. A. Felix Du Pont Jr., the former Eleanor Hoyt, crashed in the fog today while attempting to make a bad weather landing at New Springville, S. I. Mrs. Du Pont was not seriously injured, but the plane was damaged. She was treated for cuts and abrasions at the Seaview hospital near the scene of her wreck and remained at the hospital until late in the evening.

Flying a Stearman biplane, with a Wright Whirlwind motor, Mrs. Du Pont, who is 19 years old, left Glenn Curtiss airport about 1:30 o'clock. It was hazy when she took off, but she said after the accident things appeared to clear up a little as she crossed the harbor on a course for Wilmington, Del.

Over Staten Island the haze thickened again and soon the girl, who had been trying to fly beneath it, was completely lost. The mist pressed her closer and closer to the ground, and when she could not hold an altitude of more than 300 feet without flying blind she decided to land. Looking about she discovered a large field apparently without obstruction. She circled and prepared to come in for a landing. When within twenty feet of the ground she perceived a high wire fence in her flight path. She almost cleared the fence, but her right wing tip caught. A moment later the plane struck the ground and turned over.

DECIDE SHIRT GIFT INCLUDED CASH IN POCKET

Howard Thompson, 50 years old, 3555 Southport avenue, who was picked up at the Sheffield avenue station Sunday evening on a charge of larceny, was released last night. The police decided that Thompson was not a larcenist.

He had been a guest of Joseph Beron and his wife, Katherine, for Christmas dinner in their home at 3551 Wrightwood avenue. Because his shirt was dirty Mrs. Beron gave him one of Mr. Beron's. It was an old shirt, this gift, but in one of its pockets Mr. Beron had hidden his savings of $155.

Before the police could find and arrest him Thompson had spent $115 of the host's money, or ex-money the police reasoning was that when Mrs. Beron gave away a shirt she gave away the pocket and all that was in it. Which made it a case of house-keepers and Thompson a spender with his own funds.

CALLS BRENNAN POWER BEHIND CROWE REGIME

Legislators on Sanitary Pay Rolls Bared.

train them for this work, he said, they were put to work writing the essays on the flag, loyalty and other subjects. And, he added, everybody on the pay roll was a patriot.

Judge Kelly, a Democrat, cross-examined Garry sharply and obviously was not satisfied with some of his explanations.

"Brennan had a lot of deals on," said the witness. "He outsmarted the Republicans. He kept them fighting among themselves and that is why he could beat them. His idea was that politics was a business and to get the best out of it that you could. He was a real boss."

Handwriting Expert Heard.

The other witness of the afternoon session was J. Fordyce Wood, a handwriting expert. He testified that in his opinion Martin Edelstein, former real estate agent for the board, who is one of the defendants in the trial, had written the names of three fictitious employes on the pay rolls. The names were B. Cohen, M. Rhoades, and W. E. Levinson.

Under the questioning of Assistant State's Attorney Harold Keele, he said that he believed Edelstein also had written the indorsements on the checks totaling $5,000. This testimony was allowed to go into the record after a legal fight on the promise of the prosecution to connect it up later with a conspiracy.

Word was also received from San Diego, Cal., saying that Timothy Connelley, fugitive former purchasing agent of the district, has been found. Prosecutor Northup said that he would start extradition proceedings at once.

Miss Loretta Morey, 2825 West Monroe street, a blond young woman, who is a niece of former State Senator John T. Denvir, probably will be recalled as a witness today. Yesterday she admitted entertaining out of town pay rollers for the trustees. The evidence on the cinder path along the north shore channel road was delayed for a day by the political revelations given by the two main witnesses yesterday.

THE MORNING SESSION

Representative R. J. Branson of Centralia, who was the chairman of the legislative committee in 1929 which investigated the sanitary district, revealed at the morning session that a "statesmen's record" was kept for politicians who were too proud to have their names appear on an ordinary pay roll. Prosecutor Northup started his detectives after this document to see if it could still be found.

Mr. Branson also produced a list of members of the house and senate who appeared on the pay rolls, or who sponsored employes for the district pay rolls. Although these discoveries were made by a legislative committee they were never formally put into the legislative records. Judge Fisher forced them into the court record over the objection of the defense attorneys.

The Purpose of Witness.

When Prosecutor Northup called Mr. Branson to the stand, Judge Fisher inquired as to the purpose of the witness.

"I want to establish by this witness the number of lawmakers on the district pay roll," replied Prosecutor Northup.

"All of them were on the pay roll directly or indirectly," remarked Attorney Fink.

"Will you stipulate that to be a fact?" asked the prosecutor. "If you will, we will not have to question this witness."

"I guess we had better not stipulate," said Attorney Fink. "Maybe it would be better to question this witness."

The defense attorney then asked Representative Branson if his committee punished any member for being a pay roller. He replied that the committee only made a report.

"It is evident why nobody was punished," replied Prosecutor Northup. "They were all on the pay roll. They certainly would not punish themselves."

Records on Pay Rollers.

The witness then was sent to go over his records to show how many legislators were on the pay roll. He returned with a complete document, which included all except those on the statesmen's record. He said that there were 304 members in the house and senate, and that 31 representatives and nine senators were on the pay roll in their own names. He refused to hazard a guess on how many other lawmakers sponsored district employes. The list would tell, he said.

The report submitted to the legislature contained only the number, not the names, the witness said. Judge Fisher asked if the list would be put into evidence. Attorney Fink said that he himself had no objection, but that his associate, Attorney John McInerney, did not believe it should go in because he did not feel that he should be the one to put such a document before the public in view of the fact that the legislature suppressed it.

Legislator Is Questioned.

"I see no legal objection to this document," said Judge Fisher. "If the state offers it as an exhibit I will rule that it be made part of the record." Prosecutor Northup made the offer and over the formal objection of Attorney Fink it was admitted. The questioning of Branson continued.

JUDGE FISHER—Tell the court the reason nothing could be done in the legislature about this situation. A.—The only thing we could have done would have been to expel some from the legislature. We could not get enough votes to do that.

PROSECUTOR NORTHUP—What did your committee do? A.—We recommended that no member of the legislature be on a public pay roll during his term of office.

Q.—What was done about that? A.—I introduced such a bill at the succeeding session of the legislature, but it was killed in committee.

Erastus D. Telford, former senator from Salem, testified that he was paid $300 a month for "rendering legal opinions." E. J. Apt, former senator from East St. Louis, said he obtained his $250 a month for "doing nothing."

OFFICIAL SPONSORS OF CANAL PAY ROLLERS LISTED

In the tabulation which follows is shown the list of former sanitary district payrollers and their sponsors as presented in the sanitary district graft conspiracy trial yesterday by State Representative Branson of Centralia. The list was prepared for the legislative committee, which was investigating the whoopee régime of the district, after the scandal broke in 1928. It does not attempt to analyze the complete pay roll, but only that portion in which the names of legislators appeared as drawing pay or sponsoring employés. It also includes names, relatives of legislators and employés of the legislature.

The tabulation gives the names of individual sponsors above the names of beneficiaries of their indorsement separately from combinations of sponsors. The political parties of the sponsors are indicated by [Rep.] Republican and [Dem.] Democrat. The position and monthly salary of each pay roller follow his name.

CAPTURE $500,000 DISTILLERY NEAR POLICE STATION

Passaic, N. J., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—An illicit distillery, connected with pipe lines under the Passaic river with five tanks of 500,000 gallon capacity in Wallington, with equipment valued in excess of $500,000 and capable of turning out by continuous operation 30,000 gallons of alcohol, was raided tonight on the first floor of the old Reid-Barry plant here. The plant was within four blocks of police headquarters.

The plant, which Federal Agent Joseph Frayne of New York described the most modern and elaborate he had seen had its own air purifying apparatus under the name of the Ozone Manufacturing company, and a complete chemical laboratory.

Just before the men working in the plant were "tipped" that a raid was imminent, chemists had made a check of the 50,000 gallons of finished product on hand, worth $132,000 at the market, the agents said. The tests showed the alcohol was 198 proof.

Sixteen steel vats, each of a capacity of 22,500 gallons, were filled with mash. There were two stills capable of turning out 15,000 gallons daily. No one was found on the premises.

BENGHASI, Africa, Dec. 28.—(AP)—The campaign against native rebels in Cirenaica in the Italian colony of Libya, North Africa, resulted in 1,737 deaths during the past year, Gen. Graziani reported today. Of these 1,602 were rebels and 135 were Italian regulars, including three officers. The general reported that all the rebel chiefs have been killed. In the course of the campaign, 12,000 camels were taken, he said.

IN MISSISSIPPI VALLEY

New Orleans, La., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—When the levee broke at Glendora, Miss., this morning bobbing on the crest of the flood which swept through the town was a big Christmas tree which the waters had not stripped of its bags of candy, candles, tinsels, and toys.

Where it came from no one yet knows. Fearing that it portends tragedy, all kinds of craft have set out from the small Tallahatchie county town believing that some person or persons may have perished in the flood.

The town of Glendora is covered with six feet of water, and the flood is still rising. Citizens had moved to the high embankments of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad for safety, where they are encamped tonight.

To the south of Glendora, Ruleville and Cottondale are threatened and thousands of inhabitants are coming in from that direction. Three counties are practically under water—Tallahatchie, Panola, and Quitman.

Several extra squads of convicts are being rushed to join those already on the scene in fighting to hold the levees at points threatened all along the Tallahatchie river.

At Monroe, La., while the water is now at 40.6 feet, experts believe that with fair weather the situation will improve and there there is no immediate cause for alarm in that sector.

Mississippi convicts, at work on the levees, are being praised by citizens and guards. They are working ceaselessly, some of them having been without sleep or rest for twenty-four hours.

JUSTICE OF PEACE FOR FOUR YEARS WITHOUT ANY LEGAL SANCTION

Monroe, Mich., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—They buried a former bartender here today who set a strange record. He held a justice of peace office for four years without legal sanction.

Fred Schoepfer, who died at the age of 61, defied city authorities to put him out, and made good his bluff. It all started when by a margin of one vote a Municipal court was approved, the intent being to consolidate all justice offices into one and to allow only one attorney to be municipal judge. Schoepfer was not a lawyer.

The city commission notified Schoepfer that his office was vacant, but he ignored the order and continued to dispense justice and collect debts by garnishment.

When his term was up in July, 1930, he announced he would hold office until a successor was elected. The city refused to allow him or any one else to run for the office, and so Schoepfer settled down for a lifetime job, provided he was not molested by court action. The city's moves were confined to threats.

Schoepfer was a friend to hundreds of down and outers and was always good for a "touch."

His place will not be filled.

MOVE TO INDICT WILSON AVENUE SLAYERS TODAY

Hunt Suspect Named by Pals as Actual Killer.

CRIMINAL COURT.
James Stokes, manslaughter, sentenced to 1 to 14 years in the penitentiary by Judge George Fred Rush.

An indictment charging murder against Marcella Royce, 17 years old, Dorothy Evans, 16 years old, and four men, Frank Freeman, Jack Burlison, Nicholas Bruno and Tony Papa, for the slaying of Policeman James J. Caplis in an attempted robbery of the Beach View Garden café, 824 Wilson avenue, will be asked of the grand jury this morning, Chief of Detectives Schoemaker announced last night.

His announcement came as Lieut. William Cusack and a squad went to 1733 Congress street to arrest Tony Plaza, named by one of the girls as the actual killer of Caplis. Plaza had left nearly 24 hours before. In the house, however, police found a .44 caliber rifle, loaded with nine cartridges. It was used in the shooting, Cusack said.

Hopes for Speedy Trial.

Chief Schoemaker said that he hoped for a speedy trial of the six prisoners. Twelve witnesses have identified the four men, he said. Whether the girls will be tried with the men in Criminal court, or alone in Juvenile court, is to be determined later. All of the prisoners, Schoemaker declared, have made complete or partial admissions. The Evans girl, in her statement, revealed how Marcella was introduced to the robbery plan.

"I saw Marcella," said Dorothy, "and I said: 'Say, Red Freeman's got a stickup lined up. Want to go along?' She answered: 'K. O. kid. I need some dough.'"

The Royce girl talked fully. She told she and Dorothy were first assigned to dine in the restaurant and signal the men when the coast was clear for the holdup. The plan was changed at the last minute.

Girl Pins Crime on Plaza.

At the café entrance, Marcella said, they captured a taxi driver.

"Some of the boys wanted to let him go," she went on, "but I put a stop to that. I said: 'Are you a bunch of amateurs? Do you want him to call police?' They listened to me."

After the shooting, she said, all adjourned to a west side restaurant where they examined their guns to see who had killed Caplis. "We came to the conclusion Tony Plaza did it," said Marcella. "He said: 'Yes, I killed him.'"

The girls and men were held at the detective bureau yesterday and viewed by the shooting witnesses. The parents of the girls were also present. During the day writs of habeas corpus were asked for the release of the prisoners, but were dismissed when Assistant State's Attorney Harry S. McMorrow informed the court that indictments would be voted soon.

Two Boys Arrested.

Two boys were arrested last night when they called at the home of Marcella Royce after writing a letter to her mother that they might be able to aid Marcella. They are Emmons Brown, 16 years old, of 4730 Beacon street, a sophomore at Senn high school, and Pierre Zutto, 17, of 936 Lincoln place.

Brown denied having anything to do with the note, but Zutto admitted having dictated it and asserted Brown wrote it. Both admitted they did not know Marcella. Zutto explained, however, he had seen the bandits escape from the cafe following the shooting, and wanted to look at Marcella to see if she was one of them. Police believe the boys wrote the letter during an "inspirational" moment.

2 PHILADELPHIA HOODLUMS SLAIN IN GANG REVENGE

Trapped in Hideout by Five Gunmen.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 28.—(AP)—An execution squad from the underworld ended the gangster careers of Samuel E. Grossman and Albert Skale today, avenging, detectives said, the slaying of Mickey Duffy, racketeer, in Atlantic City last summer.

The two gangsters, free on bail as material witnesses in the Duffy shooting, were cornered as they sat at a desk in a gambling hangout and shot before they had a chance to resist.

The killers, who numbered five, escaped in a big sedan with New Jersey license plates in which they had arrived. They fled the building by one door while two policemen who had heard the gunfire were battering their way in through another entrance.

Hold Five Witnesses.

Five other men, who are in custody, and possibly more are believed to have been in the gaming room when Grossman and Skale were assassinated.

Two of these are in a hospital. Harry Blum, with a wound in his hand believed to have been received as he fled from the room, was captured in the closet of a nearby house. Raymond Boyne, also known as Johnny Murphy, suffered a broken ankle in jumping from the roof of the building where the shooting occurred to another roof.

The other three are Max Rice, Whitey Cohen and Harry Silverberg, the latter a brother of Al Silverberg, reputed rival of Duffy in the beer business. Rice is said to have been the doorkeeper of the gambling den. Cohen and Silverberg were arrested in the vicinity, but denied knowledge of the affray. However, Skale asked before he died, police said, "How bad is Cohen shot?"

Grossman was killed with five shots through his head as he sat at the desk and reached for a revolver in the drawer. His body was found slumped in the chair.

Found Dying by Window.

Skale was shot once, police learned, but as he ran to a window and smashed the glass in an effort to get out he was pulled back and four more bullets were fired into him. One bullet hit him in the left temple, another pierced his left lung, a third lodged near his heart, another struck him in the ribs and the fifth went through his hand.

Police found him on the floor beneath the broken window. He died in a hospital three hours later. Authorities said Skale apparently did not recognize his assailants and quoted him as asking who had shot him.

After the Duffy murder last August Grossman, Skale, and Joseph Beatty, Duffy's bodyguard and chauffeur, were sought in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New York. They surrendered Nov. 9 and were released on bond as material witnesses.

A maid in a boardwalk hotel where Duffy was shot was reported to have identified the trio as three men she saw run from the hotel after the shooting. Later she denied the identification.

WOMAN HURT BY FALL AFTER SPAT WITH HUSBAND

Following a quarrel with her husband Mrs. Isabelle Cranfield, 38 years old, of Syracuse, N. Y., leaped or fell last night from the Paulina street platform of the north side branch of the Rapid Transit lines. She suffered a broken left hip and leg and was taken to the Ravenswood hospital.

Her husband, Arthur Cranfield, wealthy billiard hall owner of Syracuse, told police that he and his wife were staying at the Roscoe Plaza hotel, 1650 Roscoe street.

They had a minor dispute, he said, and she left the apartment. He followed her and saw her enter the elevated station. Later he found her on the ground beneath the structure. He did not know whether she jumped or fell accidentally, he said.

U. S. TURNS BACK 70 MILLION CASH AS TAX REFUNDS

Amount Is Smaller than Year Before.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—Nearly seventy million dollars were returned to taxpayers during 1931 in the form of federal tax refunds, it was disclosed today in a report made to congress by Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon. This year's total of $69,476,920 was considerably lower than that of 1930, when $126,836,333 in refunds were returned.

ANDREW MELLON.

The refunds included taxes illegally collected by the bureau of internal revenue during the year. They represent actual money returned to the persons and concerns involved and do not include credits and abatements which are deducted from taxes assessed but not yet paid.

Two More than a Million.

Only two refunds amounted to more than $1,000,000 this year, as compared with twelve last year. The largest individual amount, $1,784,494, went to the Prairie Pipe Line company of Independence, Kas., while the second largest, $1,158,675, went to the Illinois Central Railroad company of Chicago. In the Prairie group, however, the Prairie Oil and Gas company at Parco, Wyo., got $31,924 and the Prairie Oil and Gas company at Independence $531,740, making the total for the three concerns $2,348,158.

The United Verde Copper company at Clarkdale, Ariz., was returned $50,476, while the New York offices of the company received $996,882, bringing the total for the two to $1,047,398. Only $554 was refunded this year to the United States Steel corporation, which last year headed the list with $15,208,343.

Familiar Names Listed.

Many names familiar to the country were among those listed in the report as receiving refunds from the government. John D. Rockefeller got $31,324, while John D. Rockefeller Jr. received $1,804; John Jacob Astor was given $10,365; Alfred P. Sloan of General Motors received $15,112. Cornelius Vanderbilt got $3,719, while the estate of William K. Vanderbilt received $368,998. Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, retired, president of the Radio Corporation of America, received $1,753.

Secretary Mellon himself was given $59,938, while his brother, R. B. Mellon, got $14,728, and Jennie K. Mellon, $9,594. Another cabinet member, Secretary of Commerce Robert P. Lamont, received a refund of $10,964, while Senator Hamilton F. Kean of New Jersey got $806, and Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas $671.

For Hollywood Figures.

Douglas Fairbanks, the movie star, was given back $12,391, while two other members of the movie colony, Helene Costello Sherman and Dolores Costello Barrymore, received refunds of $747 each through the estate of their mother. Vivian Duncan of the Duncan sisters received $505. William Fox, the movie producer, received $756, while Jesse Lasky, another producer, got $612. Texas Guinan received a refund of $2,469.

James W. Gerard, former United States ambassador to Germany, received $1,693, while the present ambassador to Poland, John N. Willys, got $11,873. Bernard M. Baruch was given a refund of $4,535.

Two five and ten cent store magnates, S. S. Kresge and Richard W. Woolworth, received refunds of $2,506 and $2,128, respectively, although the F. W. Woolworth company was given a refund of $637,961.

Albert Payson Terhune, author of dog stories, was given $1,297, and Bernar Macfadden, publisher and physical culture advocate, was returned $1,016. The New York Yankees baseball club received $10,858, while the estate of Payne Whitney, famous race horse owner, received $678,449.

Mrs. Dorothy Caruso, widow of the famous tenor, Enrico Caruso, received $7,292, while Mrs. Maria Chaliapin, widow of the famous basso, Feodor Chaliapin, got $973.

Walter Hagen, noted golfer, received $902, while Paulino Uzcudun, Basque heavyweight boxer, got $645.

RICHARD DIX.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—Richard Dix, movie star, pleaded guilty to evasions of income tax payments before United States District Judge Paul McCormick today. The court imposed a nominal fine of $500, stating a belief that Dix had been the victim of bad advice on the part of an income tax adviser.

The guilty plea was entered through an arrangement with internal revenue department officials, who had effected a settlement of the government's claims.

Sam Haber, special agent, said Dix had paid the government $58,502 additional taxes; $29,251 in penalties and $10,000 in interest. The government charged Dix with evading payment of $33,025 in his 1927 and 1928 returns and $25,477 on his 1926 returns.

"I employed an income tax adviser to make my returns," said Dix. "He prepared the returns and I signed them. When I learned there was a deficiency, I posted a check with government officials for $110,000 to cover the shortage."

GIRL REFUSES TO PROSECUTE HER ATTACKER; JAILED

Mrs. Josephine Krzysik, 18 years old, 6112 West 22d court, Cicero, was sentenced to six months in the county jail by Judge Philip Sullivan in the Criminal court yesterday when she refused to prosecute the man she had previously named as her attacker.

According to Assistant State's Attorney Thomas Johnson, the girl testified before the grand jury that Peter Novak, 18 years old, 3358 Auburn avenue, had raped her on the Planetarium island on July 5. After the testimony was presented, Prosecutor Johnson said, the girl disappeared and was not found until three days ago, living at the home of Novak's sister.

The state was forced to nol pros the charges when Mrs. Krzysik refused to testify or tell why she would not. Then Johnson asked that she be cited for contempt of court. Judge Sullivan ordered her taken to jail immediately.

Lay Suicide to Winnetka Woman to Ill Health

A verdict of suicide while despondent over ill health and financial worries was returned by a coroner's jury at the inquest into the death of Miss Hilda Alina Dunn, 32, of 909 Linden avenue, Winnetka, held yesterday in Aurora. Miss Dunn died in the Copley hospital in Aurora Sunday, after swallowing poison while driving with John A. Johnson, 311 Morton avenue, Batavia. Mrs. Frances Vedden of Big Rock, Ill., her sister, testified that Miss Dunn was worried over her health and finances. Miss Dunn was an accountant for the Winnetka public schools.

Congressman Urges Full Payments to War Vets

Immediate payment in full of adjusted compensation certificates held by world war veterans was urged yesterday by Congressman Wright Patman of Texas, in a speech at the luncheon of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Congressman Patman is the author of a bill now pending in congress which would authorize such payments.

UP AND EVER UP SOARS U. S. COST OF GOVERNMENT

Increase 300 Per Cent in Fifteen Years.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—The federal bureaucracy is a voracious tax eater. In the last 15 years, while the population increased 16 per cent, the number of federal employés increased 37 per cent and the expenditures on the civil functions of the central government rose nearly 300 per cent.

Largely because of the expense of such effort as is being made to enforce prohibition, the cost of federal law enforcement is now ten times what it was 15 years ago. The cost of the legislative, judicial, executive and other general functions of the government has trebled, while the cost of paternalistic, subventional and regulative activities has quadrupled.

President's Office Costly.

The presidential office, with the pomp and circumstance which pertain to it, now costs the taxpayers more than $1,650,000 a year, while congress represents an annual expense in excess of 30 millions, each one of the 96 senators and 440 representatives costing the public treasury $57,633 a year.

Under the title of "executive office" in the budget he transmits to congress, the President lists expenditures totaling $472,380 for the current fiscal year, an increase of $50,000 over 1931. The estimate for the 1933 fiscal year is $429,380.

First comes the item of the President's salary—$75,000. Then there is an additional $25,000 for the President's traveling and entertainment expenses paid out of the treasury upon vouchers signed by the executive. There is talk of reducing the President's salary if the pay of senators, congressmen and government employés should be reduced. Under the constitution, however, a reduction of the presidential pay, even if voted at once, could not become effective until the next presidential term beginning March 4, 1933.

White House Expenses.

Theoretically all of the expense of the presidential office and of the President and his family is borne by the public treasury except the actual cost of the food they consume. The government pays the cooks and other White House servants, pays for the servants' food, pays for the food consumed by guests.

The maintenance of the White House and grounds is costing $185,000 this fiscal year. There are 60 employés, including ushers, butlers, footmen, cooks, maids, pantrymen, gardeners, charwomen, laundresses, a valet, a plumber, a handy man, and laborers whose pay aggregates $99,540. Food and other supplies cost $16,248, equipment $11,982 and repairs and alterations, $10,809.

There are other expenses of the presidential office not listed in the executive budget. There are, for example, the military and naval aids assigned to the White House for participation in ceremonials and social affairs. Their salaries are paid from the war and navy department appropriations for pay of officers. One army and one navy officer is on duty continuously at the White House while a score or more other officers, generally handsome young bachelors, are on call for service at receptions, state dinners and other social affairs in addition to performance of their regular war and navy department duties.

Secret Service Guard.

Then there is the cost of protection of the President and his family which does not appear in the executive office budget. The President is guarded by secret service operatives day and night wherever he may happen to be. This item of expense is buried in the treasury department budget under the heading of "suppressing counterfeiting and other crimes" which is costing $564,140 this fiscal year. W. H. Moran, chief of the secret service, refuses information on the number of operatives assigned to the White House and the cost of the President's protection which is probably in the neighborhood of $50,000.

Similarly the cost of the White House police force is found not in the executive office but in the treasury budget. It is $116,299.

The executive office staff consists of 37 employés with salaries aggregating $126,180. The President has three secretaries, each with a salary of $10,000. The contingent expenses of the executive office total $43,500.

The White House and its grounds have an appraised value of 18 millions. The rental value is therefore a trifle more than one million a year. It to this rental there be added the White House and executive office expenses, including the military and naval aides, secret service men and police, it appears that the annual cost of the presidential office to the taxpayers is $1,650,679.

Cost of Congress.

For the expenses of the senate the appropriation this year is $3,249,292. The salary item for 96 senators is $960,000, while their mileage at ten cents a mile to and from Washington requires $51,000. Salaries of officers and employés aggregate $1,894,132, and the contingent expenses, including that of the multitudinous senate investigations, comes to $544,160.

The house of representatives is costing $8,183,612 this year. The salaries of representatives, territorial delegates and commissioners total $4,405,000, their mileage $175,000. The salaries of house officers and employés aggregate $1,035,962 in addition to which $2,200,000 is appropriated for the clerk hire allowance of members. The contingent expenses come to $362,650. The capitol police and other miscellaneous expenses are down for $188,050.

The architect of the capitol and 14 assistants are paid $48,580, the upkeep of the capitol costs $352,555, and improvement of the grounds $256,726. The senate office building costs $216,963 to maintain while $3,079,350 is being expended this year on its completion. The house office building costs $198,256 to maintain. Upon construction of an additional house office building $3,400,000 is being expended this year. The capitol power plant requires an outlay of $359,450.

Other Costly Appurtenances.

Upon the maintenance and extension of the library of congress there is being spent this year about $3,725,000. The botanic garden, which is an appurtenance of congress, costs $173,882, while $576,398 is being expended this year on construction of new conservatories. Free flowers and potted plants for their social affairs are botanic garden perquisites of senators and congressmen. Operation of the government printing office, another appendage of congress, requires an expenditure this year of $3,294,000.

All the items of expense of congress as listed in the budget for the legislative establishment total $27,309,340. There are other items of expense that do not appear in the legislative budget, as, for example, the cost of the postal franking privilege for senators and congressmen. Franked mail matter carried for senators and representatives last year, had it been paid for at regular postage rates, would have added $852,641 to the postoffice department.

The appraised value of the capitol and its grounds is $45,490,000, its rental value $2,729,400 a year. The total cost of congress thus becomes $30,891,381, or an average of $57,633 for each senator and member of the house.

Curtis Has Scheme to Save Government Half a Billion

Washington, D. C., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—Vice President Charles Curtis joined today in the fight for a reduction in governmental expenditures with the assertion that many millions of dollars could be saved by abolishing duplication in governmental bureaus and by discontinuing the printing of unnecessary public documents.

He estimated that if congress and the executive departments coöperated in this direction the annual saving would approximate 500 million dollars without impairing the federal service. He expressed the opinion that congress should restrict public documents, many of which, he said, are printed each year and never leave the public document room.

Discusses Harrison's Plan.

The vice president's suggestion was made while he was discussing the declaration of Senator Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.], that the budget would be cut 300 million dollars.

"I am firmly convinced," Mr. Curtis said, "that if all the government departments cut out the duplication of work, and if congress would stop the publication of so many unnecessary documents a great saving could be made.

Government Must Act.

"It has been apparent for many years that government bureaus have been constantly duplicating the efforts of those in other departments. While an effort was made under President Harding to eliminate wasteful practices, nothing has been done. The government has been able to sidestep any action to correct these evils during the years of prosperity. But it is now the duty of the executive branches and of congress to take decisive action for real governmental economy.

"While I do not in every particular know where savings might be made, if this policy of economy should be followed millions of dollars might be saved at this time when the government is calling on the people to increase their federal taxes to meet the increased cost of government."

ENGINEER WHO SPED PHYSICIAN TO DYING M'KINLEY RETIRES

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Thirty years ago John Draney sat at the throttle of a locomotive racing death across New York state in a vain attempt to save the life of President McKinley.

Thursday evening at 7:12 o'clock he will close the throttle and climb from the cab for the last time, retired after almost 59 years of service with the Lackawanna railroad.

When President McKinley lay dying in Buffalo the Lackawanna railroad called Draney to pilot the train which was to take the late Dr. Janeway from New York to the President's bedside. Draney broke all records for speed between the two cities and his run has become one of the traditions of the men who "pound the rails."

ELGIN DEALERS CUT MILK PRICE 1 CENT A QUART

Retail milk dealers of Elgin announced yesterday a new reduction in the price of their product, to take effect Jan. 1. Only quart bottles will be reduced, the price of pints and of cream remaining at the present level, which was established only a month ago.

The new rate for quarts will be 10 cents, with pints remaining at 6 cents. Prior to Dec. 1 quarts retailed at 12 cents and pints at 7 cents. At the time the 1 cent cut in both pints and quarts was made, milk wagon drivers accepted a $3 a week reduction in pay.

Dealers referred to the second reduction as a move to increase consumption, adding that they were not sure how it would be absorbed. They are now paying the Pure Milk association $2.32 a hundred pounds, and have hopes that this price will be cut next month, they said. A butter company in Elgin has been selling on a cash and carry basis at 8 cents a quart and 5 cents a pint and is reported to have taken more than 1,000 customers away from the delivering milk dealers.

LIFT JUVENILE HOME QUARANTINE.

The quarantine on the boys' quarters in the juvenile home, placed there Dec. 19 after four boys had been found suffering from scarlet fever, was lifted yesterday, when the patients were pronounced recovered.

PARENTS FIGHT TO KEEP CHILD FROM DAUGHTER

A father and mother filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the Circuit court yesterday, charging that their daughter is not a proper guardian for her 6 year old daughter. The grandparents of the child are M. D. Wright, an interior decorator of 250 Clinton avenue, Oak Park, and his wife, Pauline. The action was directed against their daughter, Mrs. Edna Messinger, 1216 North Dearborn street, and her husband, Arthur.

The child, Pauline Louise, the bill charged, was born out of wedlock. Messinger, it is alleged, is the stepfather. Both the mother and foster father have tuberculosis, it is charged, and at times the child has been sent to beg on the streets to support them. The bill asserts that the grandparents have had the custody of the child during the last six months, but alleges that Mrs. Messinger has threatened to harm her daughter unless she is returned. A hearing on the petition is scheduled to be held today before Judge Thomas J. Lynch.

FEDERAL RELIEF FUNDS NEEDED, SENATORS TOLD

Chicago and New York Aid Is Described.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—Relief of the nation's unemployment this winter will require federal funds, social service officials from Chicago, New York and Philadelphia today told a senate subcommittee considering the LaFollette and Costigan bills to provide 250 and 375 millions respectively in federal aid.

SAMUEL GOLDSMITH.

Samuel A. Goldsmith, executive director of the Jewish Charities of Chicago, presented figures showing the city's unemployed in October, 1931, totaled 624,000, or 40 per cent of those ordinarily at work. He compared this figure with an estimate of 168,000 out of work in Chicago in October, 1930.

Relief was being administered to 97,000 families in Chicago last month compare dwith 16,500 families in November of 1930, he said.

Must Use All Resources.

"We insist that persons who come to our agencies," Mr. Goldsmith testified, "shall have used up all of their resources and come to us empty handed. We even ask that they borrow on their life insurance policies. These dependents on charity now are people who actually have been reduced to destitution."

Municipal difficulties in Chicago have made it impossible so far to sell $2,000,000 in relief bonds, Mr. Goldsmith said. He told of the expanded budgets of the charitable agencies in Chicago, saying that whereas the United Charities of Chicago had spent $51,000 on relief work in November of 1930 its expenditures last month totaled $522,000.

All money available for private charities for use up to Oct. 1, 1931, was expended on last July 13, Mr. Goldsmith continued. A drive for the year ending Sept. 30, 1932, netted $10,500,000, but $5,000,000 of that had been expended before the new fiscal year began.

Says City Needs $25,000,000.

"As the situation stands today," he told the committee, "Chicago will have nothing to carry on beyond Feb. 15. Chicago will need through 1932 at least $25,000,000. It has $5,000,000 and there is a possibility that the state of Illinois will grant it $10,000,000."

Asked to estimate the needs of the United States on the basis of known facts about Chicago, Mr. Goldsmith said "an expenditure of 600 or 700 million dollars would be necessary to meet the situation."

William Hodson, director of the New York Welfare council, said that relief in New York City was on a "disaster" basis. The unemployed, he said, now number 800,000, or five times the normal number. Of these, he believed 100,000 heads of families were receiving charitable help and an additional 50,000 were "badly off."

Reports Wages Fall Off.

Wages in the city, he declared, have declined between $80,000,000 and $90,000,000 a month, and to meet this loss there has been a maximum of $4,000,000 a month from charity.

In discussing the situation in Pennsylvania J. Prentiss Murphy, director of the Philadelphia Children's bureau, said that a census on June 30, 1931, showed 919,000 unemployed workers and that the total was now estimated at 970,000, with 3,000,000 persons in all affected.

CHOOSES FREEZING AS SUICIDE METHOD; SITS NAKED IN COLD

Fort Morgan, Colo., Dec. 28.—Fred Gustafson, 25, saxophone player, was found sitting beside a country road today clad only in his undergarments. He said he intended to kill himself and that he thought freezing to death the easiest way. The motorists who found him persuaded him to dress and come here with them. A physician who examined him said his face, hands and feet were frostbitten. He was numb from cold. Gustafson, member of a dance orchestra in Denver, said he went out on the road Sunday night and remained there in the cold without protection until found.

REPORT RASKOB WILL STEP OUT NEXT SUMMER

Friends Say He'll Quit Democratic Helm.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—Friends of John J. Raskob said today that he will voluntarily retire from the chairmanship of the Democratic national committee after the next presidential convention and will make no move to seek reëlection. Mr. Raskob, they declared, has no desire to dominate the policies of the Democratic party or to carry on the financial burdens of the next presidential contest.

The unofficial declaration of his advisers apparently was inspired by statements recently issued by dry leaders that Mr. Raskob would be driven from the party councils in 1932.

Jewett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, is expected to retire at the same time, although his friends assert that he would not be unwilling to continue in his present position through the 1932 presidential campaign.

It is estimated that the Democratic party is indebted to Mr. Raskob by about $400,000 at this time, and the so-called victory fund of $1,500,000 is being raised with a view to cancelling this debt and furnishing enough money to finance the party until after the national convention this summer. At that time, his friends say, Mr. Raskob will step out with no further financial obligations existing between himself and his party.

'Refrigerator Bandits' Held in Bonds Totaling $945,000

Five men, members of a gang charged with stealing electric refrigerators from vacant apartments on the south side, were held to the grand jury in bonds totaling $945,000 yesterday by Municipal Judge Leon Edelman. The prisoners are: Julius Conrad, 23 years old, and Samuel Alberta, 21 years old, of 5932 South La Salle street; Rocco Angone, 28 years old, 4926 Federal street; Frank Chopetta, 23 years old, 4903 South Dearborn street, and Frank Buglio, 25 years old, 5331 South Wells street.

"Do you know what the president just told me?"

"THERE goes Mr. Smith now. You know he's one of the two men the president has been considering for the new district managership. I suppose I really shouldn't mention this, but the president chose Mr. Louis, the younger man. His experience didn't compare with Mr. Smith's, and it seemed to me that Mr. Smith was better qualified for the position.

"But Mr. Louis starts to work for us next Monday. I'd like to tell Mr. Smith why he lost out. Certainly his failure to land the position is a real heartache. The president says Mr. Smith isn't particular enough about his appearance. He isn't as clean-shaven as he should be."

ORDERS FACTOR EXTRADITED FOR TRIAL IN BRITAIN

"Jake the Barber" Faces Jail on Jan. 5.

United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker decided yesterday that John [Jake the Barber] Factor should be extradited to England for trial on charges of swindling English investors. The amount of the alleged fraud has been placed as high as $7,000,000. The commissioner's ruling came after a seven month contest between Factor's attorneys and counsel for the British crown.

Heretofore the many extradition hearings of the former Halsted street barber have been marked by optimism on the part of the defense. Yesterday Factor's wife, Rella, and one of his lawyers, G. Gale Gilbert, wept when the decision was returned. Factor listened stonily. Another of his seven lawyers, Salmon O. Levinson, pleaded with Commissioner Walker that justice should be tempered with mercy in the case because the defense had "not only two nations to contend with, but the Chicago press."

Postpone Extradition Order.

Commissioner Walker was persuaded to postpone entering the extradition order until Jan. 5. Soon after this order is entered the secretary of state will issue an extradition warrant. Factor then will be sent to jail without bonds, for the treaty between the United States and Great Britain does not provide for bail in this kind of case.

Factor's line of defense from now on will be an appeal to the federal District court from Commissioner Walker's ruling. If that fails, the appeal may be taken to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals and finally to the United States Supreme court. Factor's attorneys must report to Commissioner Walker on Jan. 5 whether they intend to appeal or not.

The Commissioner's Opinion.

Commissioner Walker's opinion filled eleven pages. After he had read it he announced that he had no alternative but to commit the defendant to jail when the extradition warrant is issued. "He can avoid going to jail by starting back for England immediately," said the commissioner.

In his opinion the commissioner reviewed the case and cited opinions from former Federal Judge K. M. Landis, Federal Judge Louis Fitzhenry, and Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the United States Supreme court to show that Factor could be extradited on the charge of "receiving sums knowing the same to be fraudulently obtained."

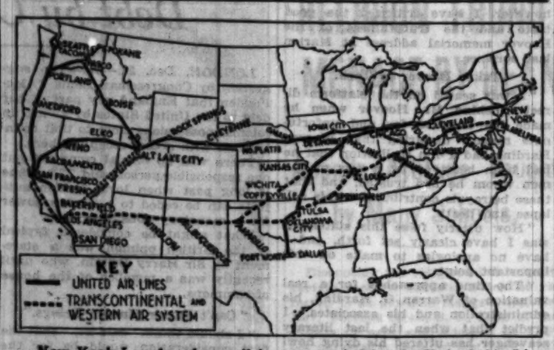
When the hearing was over, Factor embraced his wife and then walked gloomily out of the room, accompanied by a deputy marshal. He still is in technical custody, but is free to come and go as he pleases as long as the federal deputy is at his side.

History of the Case.

Factor surrendered on May 20, several weeks after search for him was begun, at request of the British government. Then followed seven months of hearings on the case. The basis of the evidence presented by Attorney Franklin R. Overmyer, counsel for the British government, was found in 300 depositions from English subjects.

While in England from 1928 to 1930 Factor was the moving figure behind the Threadneedle Press, Limited, according to the depositions. This periodical advised investors to buy stocks of Anglo-American Holding Trust, Ltd., Rhodesian Border Mining Corporation, Ltd., and Vulcan Copper Mines, Ltd. These stocks, the British government contends, were worthless.

The Air Mail Contract Battle



New York-Los Angeles mail is now carried by the United Air Lines through Chicago to Salt Lake, and then over the Western Air Express to the southern California city. The Transcontinental and Western Air System offers to carry this mail at a cut of 10 per cent over its shorter southern route.

SOUTHERN BID PERILS CHICAGO AIR MAIL ROUTE

10% Cut Is Offered by Transcontinental.

A bid involving the transfer of a large volume of transcontinental air mail from the northern route, which it now follows through Chicago to a southern route operated by the Transcontinental and Western Air system has been presented to the postoffice department, according to a statement yesterday by Richard W. Robbins, president of the transcontinental system. Mr. Robbins said his system had offered to accept a 10 per cent cut in air mail rates.

Approximately 40 per cent of the nation's air mail is now carried by United Air Lines, operating between New York and Pacific coast cities through Chicago. The United also operates between Chicago and Dallas. The Transcontinental system extends from Los Angeles through Kingman and Winslow, Ariz., Albuquerque, Amarillo, Wichita, Kansas City, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Columbus, Pittsburgh, Harrisburg, and Philadelphia to New York.

Would Shorten Schedule.

Robbins announced that his line is prepared to carry air mail between Los Angeles and New York on a twenty-four hour schedule after Jan. 1, at the 10 per cent reduction. The United Air Lines carry the mail and passengers between New York and Los Angeles in 28 hours, west to east, and 31 hours, east to west. Transcontinental proposes to have its passengers stay overnight at Kansas City while the mail goes on, and complete their journey the following day in a total elapsed time of about 36 hours.

Officials of United Air Lines refused to comment on Robbins' announcement last night. It is believed, however, that an attempt to transfer the heavy volume of Transcontinental air mail from their system to the southern route would result in speeding up of their schedules. Because their route is longer in mileage than the southern route, their time between New York and Los Angeles cannot be reduced, with their present equipment, lower than about 25 hours, it was said.

Cord Bid Causes Stir.

The movement of a readjustment in air mail rates, and the subsequent bid of Transcontinental for the large volume of coast to coast mail, follow a recent proposal made by the Cord corporation of Chicago to Postmaster General Brown that their subsidiary air lines, the Century and the Century-Pacific, would carry all the air mail in the country at a rate of 30 cents a mile for 200 pounds, as compared to the average existing rate of 60 cents a mile.

15 Degrees Below Zero in Adirondack Village

Malone, N. Y., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Owl's Head, that cold little village on a northern shoulder of the Adirondacks, reported a temperature of 15 degrees below zero at sunup today. Malone, to the north and at a lower altitude, had a 6 below reading, the coldest to date this winter.

AVIATION NOTES

Passenger fares have been reduced on United Air Lines to approximately the equivalent of rail plus Pullman rates on its five routes, that extend from Chicago to 137 cities in 28 states. The new rates will be effective Jan. 1, it was announced yesterday. A 10 per cent reduction on the new rates will be in effect on round trips. All fares include meals served on the planes in flight. The reduction amounts to 22 per cent between Chicago and Pacific coast cities, a twenty-two hour service. The United Air Lines is the largest air transport operator in the world, having completed 35,000,000 miles of flying mail, passengers, and express.

Application for the registration of federally licensed planes and pilots are being sent out to all pilots and plane owners in Illinois by the Illinois aeronautics commission, of which Maj. Reed G. Landis is chairman. The registrations require no fee, but are obligatory under the new state air law. Qualifications for the certificates of registration parallel those of the United States department of commerce.

Clarence Chamberlin, the trans-Atlantic flyer, recently received a new Lockheed Vega monoplane, powered by a Packard Diesel motor, at Detroit, and flew it to New York at a total cost of $4 for the 600 mile trip. The plane is a six passenger craft. Chamberlin estimates it would cost six persons about $4 each to fly to Paris in the plane. He tested it at high altitudes and found the motor's performance excellent.

DENY DARROW WILL AID EIGHT DOOMED TO DIE

The statement yesterday of Clarence Darrow that he and Attorney Arthur Garfield Hayes of New York would appear before the Alabama Supreme court in defense of eight Negroes sentenced to death for the rape of two white girls at Scottsboro, Ala., last March, was contradicted later in the day by other attorneys for the Negroes.

The names of Attorneys Darrow and Hayes were not included in the list of legal counsel representing the Negroes which was filed during the day with the Alabama Supreme court at Montgomery. George Chamlee Sr., one of the five lawyers retained by the International Labor Defense in the case, arranged a conference with Darrow and Hayes, who were retained by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Lowell Wakefield of the labor defense organization said that the entrance of Darrow and Hayes in the case would be welcomed, but that in view of statements made by the Negro association, "we feel that it is impossible for us or for the defendants to permit the entrance of any attorney representing that organization."

APPEALS COURT UPHOLDS GRADY DIVORCE ACTION

Finds Judge Justified in Dismissing Bills.

The Appellate court yesterday upheld the decision of Superior Judge Marcus Kavanagh, who dismissed the divorce bills of both Thomas J. Grady, real estate broker, and his wife, Eileen, after a sensational trial last year during which the court characterized evidence of bathing parties and a raid by false mustachioed sleuths on a sylvan cottage as "framed."

The higher court also upheld Judge Kavanagh's order that Grady pay $1,000 temporary allmony to his wife and sustained an injunction which prevents him from entering her apartment at 6334 North Francisco avenue.

Although the justices of the higher court disagreed in returning the decision, which was more than twenty pages in length, they repeatedly scored Grady, saying in one paragraph, "a divorce to this husband would offend conscience and the sense of justice."

Wife Not Guiltless.

However, the justices did not find Mrs. Grady guiltless, holding that her flirtation with Robert J. Robinson, a telephone company employé and a married man, was unproper.

Justices William McSurely and John J. O'Connor believed that the adultery charges made by Grady were proved, but Justice David M. Matchett, who wrote the opinion, held the proof insufficient.

Grady, whose real estate offices are at 4848 Lincoln avenue, filed a bill for divorce in June, 1929, charging desertion. Mrs. Grady countered with a cross bill charging cruelty and her husband amended his original bill, charging that his wife had committed 17 acts of adultery with four different men since their separation on Sept. 4, 1924.

Husband Uses Disguise.

During the trial Grady and one of his employés, Bernard J. Shanley, testified that they had donned disguises and had followed Mrs. Grady for several years. Shanley testified that he had seen his employer's wife bathing in the nude with another man in the lake near Highland Park. Both he and Grady, still disguised with heavy black mustaches, told of a raid upon a Bluff lake cottage late one summer evening when they found Mrs. Grady and Robinson together.

The opinion reviews in detail the testimony of the trial and the remarks of Judge Kavanagh, who said, in rendering his decision: "Robinson is the stool pigeon for Grady. The case against Mrs. Grady is founded on perjury. The evidence was the result of a frameup."

Conduct Is Reviewed.

In part the decision read: "There can be no doubt under all the circumstances that the husband's cruel and unhuman treatment and other wrongs against the wife had much to do with her indiscreet conduct. He failed to give her the protection of a wife, and countenanced her flirtation without warning or protest. These circumstances would make granting of a divorce to him for her conduct an injustice of the gravest kind."

The justices asserted that the evidence introduced by Grady was improbable and called attention to the fact that the husband had known that his wife would visit the Bluff lake cottage twenty-four hours before she arrived there, as "very significant."

YARROW VICTOR IN FIGHT BEFORE APPEALS COURT

The Appellate court yesterday reversed a $5,000 judgment against the Rev. Philip Yarrow, superintendent of the Illinois Vigilance association, which was granted to Walter L. Shaver, owner of a bookstore, by a Superior court jury six months ago. Shaver charged false arrest after he was acquitted following a raid upon his shop by Yarrow, and a trial in a municipal court for violation of the state laws against the sale of obscene volumes.

The case was remanded for a new trial and Shaver's attorney, Cameron Latter, yesterday announced that he would file a new information as soon as the formal mandate of the higher court was issued.

When the judgment was returned the Rev. Mr. Yarrow, who lives at 11158 Longwood drive, Beverly Hills, refused to pay. He was arrested on an attachment and held in the county jail for several days until friends arranged an appeal bond.

$100,000 Plant Will Be Kept in Operation.

Irvin S. Berkmann's only love, his friends said yesterday, was his business. Before his death on Oct. 1 he spent most of his waking hours in the tool and die plant at 625 West Jackson boulevard, which he founded as a small shop in 1915 and developed into a $100,000 concern.

In death his first concern was that the business should be carried on. This was disclosed yesterday when his will was admitted to probate by Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Horner. Shares in the business, the Berkmann Manufacturing company, are left to six friends and employés, with instructions that they shall conserve the profits for at least 20 years and operate the business "as long as it is profitable."

Has Library in His Office.

Mr. Berkmann also directed that his body be cremated and that his ashes be scattered from the roof of his plant. That was done on Oct. 17.

He was born in Germany and learned the die setter's trade as a youth. He accumulated a considerable library, which he installed in his office and he spent his evenings there reading. Mr. Berkmann never married and had no close relatives in this country.

In addition to a general business in tool and die making and light manufacturing the shop attracted inventors and engineers with whom the owner worked in developing new technical devices.

The will makes the Drexel State bank trustee of the business and provides that all of the profits shall be held in trust for 20 years. An exception is made in case any of the beneficiaries is in need, when the bank, as trustee, may make such payments as it deems necessary.

Workers to Be Retained.

The business is to be operated with its present force of workmen so far as is practicable. If it fails to show a profit, Mr. Berkmann directed that it be sold and the profits distributed to the six beneficiaries.

They are Joseph B. Munger, 3942 West Monroe street, vice president of the company, who gets 25 per cent of the business; Frank M. Middendorf, 1000 South Crescent avenue, Park Ridge, secretary, who gets 15 per cent; Robert W. Hall of Clintonville, Wis., a friend, who gets 15 per cent; Joseph Bider, a veteran die setter in the shop, who gets 5 per cent; Reginald J. Neal, president of the Drexel State bank, who gets 15 per cent, and Miss Genevieve L. Scott, 4003 Kenmore avenue, who gets 25 per cent.

Missing Evanston Writer Is Found Poisoned in Hotel

Gilbert Campbell, 49 years old, 2910 Harrison street, Evanston, disappeared from his home Saturday. On Sunday his wife asked the Evanston police to search for him. Yesterday Mrs. Harrison found a note stating that he was going to the Harrison hotel in Chicago. At her request the management of the hotel broke into Campbell's room and found him unconscious from the effects of poison he had swallowed. He was taken to the Evanston hospital. Relatives said they knew of no reason why Campbell, a writer for trade and scientific papers, should attempt suicide.

GANDHI CALLS ON INDIA TO FACE BRITISH BULLETS

'Ready to Sacrifice Lives of Million for Liberty.'

BOMBAY, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Mahatma Gandhi declared today that he would not flinch in sacrificing the lives of a million people to purchase the liberty of India.

The mahatma made this statement to 50,000 white capped Nationalists gathered in an open field to hear his first speech since his return from the London round table conference. He spoke from a lofty platform made of stout bamboo poles, festooned with the Nationalist colors—white, red and green—and surmounted by a spinning wheel.

The crowd was considerably smaller than the audiences Gandhi addressed before he left for London, and some observers said he had lost in prestige because of the failure of the round table conference. The listeners broke into applause infrequently, and there were no displays of the old fervent and militant revolutionary spirit.

Expects All to Enlist.

"If the fight is inevitable I will expect every son and daughter of mother India to contribute his mite," the mahatma said. "However, I will not abandon attempts to save the nation from a fiery ordeal. If, on the other hand, there is no single ray of hope I shall not hesitate to call upon you to bear any amount of suffering."

In another speech this evening Gandhi uttered what some of his hearers interpreted as a threat to withdraw all coöperation from the round table conference committees coming to India shortly, unless the government repeals recent restrictive ordinances.

Will Have to Face Bullets.

Speaking before the Welfare of India league, Gandhi said he would advise coöperation with the committees if the ordinances were repealed, but "what I have learned leaves very little hope for coöperation unless I am to lose all sense of self-respect."

He declared he could not expect to be able to exercise the same amount of restraint as he had if it came to taking a strong step.

"In the last fight you had to face lathis [staves]," he said, "and in this fight you will have to face bullets."

Troops Clash with "Red Shirts."

PESHAWAR, India, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Anti-British "red shirt" tribesmen and troops clashed today at Gonda, reports received here said. Four "red shirts" are believed to have been killed and twenty-eight wounded in two affrays.

"Red shirts," garlanded with flowers and shouting revolutionary slogans, ran about the streets of Peshawar throughout the day, offering themselves for arrest. Total arrests throughout the North-West Frontier province had reached 762 at noon.

MacDonald Denounces Agitators.

LOSSIEMOUTH, Scotland, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Prime Minister MacDonald described the situation in India tonight as "most deplorable" and denounced Indian agitators in vigorous terms. Recent disorders in the North-West Frontier province and in Bengal, he said, did not represent a "baffled and oppressed India struggling to be free" but a "mischievous movement trampling in its own self-will upon Indian progress.

"An enlightened India would not only give no countenance but would turn and rend them," the prime minister said. "The people in the agencies in this country who have been working many years for the enfranchisement of India must share in the government's regret at the recent happenings."

The measures directed at coping with these disorders, he said, did not represent the working out of a government policy, but quite on the contrary.

"It is very hard at a time when the government has given more proof than any of its predecessors that by negotiation and consent it was preparing, in conjunction with leaders of Indian opinion, to agree to a very large broadening of Indian freedom, that opponents of violence and disorder should have dashed from India's lips the cup of complete legislative independence that was being offered," he concluded.

Britain Warns Afghanistan.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 28.—The British government today warned Afghanistan to behave. It is reported that on Christmas eve parties of uniformed Afghans crossed the frontier through Khyber pass into British India and shot at border inhabitants. British Indian troops chased the Afghans back into Afghanistan with armored cars, machine guns, and bombing planes. Britain has demanded an apology.

Hoover, Stimson and Mills in Conference on Reparations

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—The international war debts and reparations situation was the subject of a prolonged White House conference today between President Hoover, Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, and Ogden L. Mills, undersecretary of the treasury. One hour and 15 minutes after the two officials entered the presidential study the conference broke up without either Secretary Stimson or Mr. Mills divulging any hint as to what specific phases of the debt problem had been discussed.

It was learned, however, that the United States will not attend any conference in Europe called for the sole purpose of discussing the reparations problem. Thus far, it was said, no definite invitation to attend the forthcoming Hague reparations conference has been forwarded to Washington. Such an invitation is expected, however, when definite plans for the meeting have been arranged by France and Great Britain.

Stimson Turns in Report.

At today's conference Secretary Stimson placed before the President all the latest information received at the state department regarding the conference at Basel, Switzerland, where the Young plan advisory committee found Germany unable to meet her reparations payments next year and thus started the general reparations problem to boiling again. It is understood the Stimson report contained information from Walter W. Stewart, American member of the Young committee.

Just what the United States would do in event this country was asked to send an unofficial observer has not been definitely made known. The state department officials would probably advise that one of its diplomats abroad attend the parley, while the treasury would oppose such a step.

Disarmament Is Fading.

The possibility exists that an attempt will be made to have the reparations discussions included in the agenda for the Geneva world disarmament, although officials denied knowledge that such a move was under consideration.

As a matter of fact virtually no one in Washington official life expects anything of importance to come out of the disarmament conference. The situation in Manchuria, where Japan and China are at war, and the general international and war debts situation are looked upon as virtually insurmountable obstacles to any substantial arms agreement.

THERE'LL BE NO SECRET PARLEY ON DEBTS, IT SEEMS

It Was All a Mixup, London, Paris Say.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 28.—A curious mixup between London and Paris was straightened out today. It was announced in Paris last night that Prime Minister MacDonald had invited Premier Laval to a private discussion, preliminary to the international reparations conference at The Hague on Jan. 18, in order that Great Britain and France might reach a common policy.

But this morning Premier Laval officially denied that an invitation has been received. The British foreign office at the same time explained that no invitation has been sent, but added that Mr. MacDonald had written a letter to the French premier which might have resulted in such a meeting.

May Switch from The Hague.

The reparations conference, it is reported today, may meet at Lausanne instead of The Hague. The change is said to be due to a general realization that the reparations conference may overlap the international disarmament meeting, which opens at Geneva on Feb. 2. Statesmen, diplomats here argue, would be unable to attend both conferences because The Hague and Geneva are too far apart.

It was learned that Great Britain's letter to sound out the powers as to the desirability of postponing the disarmament conference resulted in expressions that it should not be postponed, and it is now practically certain it will open on Feb. 2.

There is a strong possibility, however, that if the atmosphere is found to be unfavorable, the conference may content itself with appointing a number of committees and adjourning for an indefinite period.

Laval May Accept Later.

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Dec. 28.—An official note from Premier Laval's ministry today emphatically denied reports that the French premier had been invited to London to confer with Prime Minister MacDonald over the coming conference on debts and reparations.

The French statement says that before such a meeting will be opportune the British and French experts must complete their labors. In other words, the French government now finds Mr. MacDonald's invitation inconvenient, but there is no doubt it will be revived and accepted later.

This incident reveals that despite the unanimous signature on the Basel report of the Young plan advisory committee, all the fundamental differences of opinion between France and Britain over reparations settlement remain unchanged.

HOLDUP GANG'S JESTS OVER KILLING VICTIM TOLD IN CONFESSION

The jests of a gang of youthful bandits as they returned from an unsuccessful holdup in which they had killed a victim were described last night in a confession made at the detective bureau. The man they killed was Henry Schmitt, owner of a restaurant at 4728 Belmont avenue, who was shot Dec. 10 when he attempted to repel the bandits by hurling pies and plates at them.

Walter Sleva, 18 years old, 2265 Diversey avenue, made the confession. He was a member of the gang, but was left behind when its members went to commit the Schmitt holdup. Those who confessed committing the murder are Charles LeGrand, alias Wuertz, 25 years old, an ex-convict from East St. Louis; Walter Wozolek, 25 years old, 884 North Marshfield avenue, also an ex-convict; and Arthur Klein, 23 years old, 2422 Iowa street. Sleva was left in a beer flat at 811 Rose street during the robbery.

"When they came back," he stated, "Le Grand had pie all over his face and coat, and I asked where he got it. Walter Wozolek said Charley got baptized with pie. You ought to have seen his face. I told him to shoot the ——.'

"Then Charley said, 'Yes, and he got what was coming to him.'

"We all had a good laugh over it. I laughed like the devil."

Le Grand, Wozolek, Sleva and Joe Kopey, 23 years old, 1328 North Campbell avenue, were captured a week ago after a running gun fight with the detective squad of Sergt. Charles Moore. Klein was arrested yesterday by the Warren avenue police. All five of the prisoners have been identified in ten or twelve robberies.

"INSIDE STORY" OF HARDING TOLD BY DAUGHERTY

Book Written by Former Attorney General.

Columbus, O., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general of the United States, announced today that he was breaking the silence he has so stolidly held since he left office in 1924, and is ready to tell his part in the many incidents that culminated in President Coolidge's request for his resignation.

HARRY M. DAUGHERTY. [Underwood & Underwood.]

Daugherty, allowing perusal of his foreword to his one and only book, said that his published work, "The Inside Story of the Harding Tragedy," was written in collaboration with Thomas Dixon, known for his writing of "The Clansmen," and will be published soon.

Daugherty, now 72, lives in semi-retirement at his modest home here.

Waits on Fall Case.

He said he delayed publication of the book, awaiting the final act in the case of Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, who was implicated in the Teapot Dome oil scandal, and also until after President Hoover dedicated the Harding memorial tomb at Marion. Fall now is in prison, while the memorial was dedicated last June.

Such recently published books as "The Strange Death of President Harding," "The Revelry," and "The President's Daughter" are called merely "filthy stories" by the former attorney general.

In particular the book denies the published story that Nan Britton's child was fathered by Harding. The facts surrounding the destroying of the account of the Midland National bank in Washington Courthouse are described as an attempt to prevent "other lies being spread about by political gossipers."

"Explains" Jess Smith's Death.

Facts surrounding the mysterious death of Jess Smith, Harding's closest friend while he was in the White House besides Daugherty, are explained as are many "other alleged lies about the Harding administration."

Dixon, according to Daugherty, did the actual writing of the book and the case can be paralleled by the other now famous ghost writer, Mrs. May Dixon Thacker, co-author of "The Strange Death of President Harding," who is a sister of Daugherty's collaborator.

"I have not written an apology for the life of Warren G. Harding or of my own, but have tried simply to tell a truthful, objective story of the storms through which we passed," said Daugherty today of his book.

"The part which I played in the nomination and election of my friend to the presidency is the proudest achievement of my life. I am the only man who could tell of this, for I am the only man who could tell the inside facts.

Charges Lies Are Told.

"I have been silent, for important reasons, since Calvin Coolidge requested my resignation, though roused to justifiable indignation many times by the obscene lies told about President Harding and myself.

"To this time I have hesitated of writing about Albert B. Fall, because his case was on the dockets of the courts. As a trustee of the Harding Memorial association I have hesitated to speak until Mr. Hoover, who owed his position as President to Warren G. Harding, had gone to Marion and dedicated the Harding memorial.

"In what I say of Mr. Hoover now, I disclaim any attempt or desire to in any way interfere with his nomination for a second term, I believe in the American system of government by great responsible parties. I believe in playing the game by the rules, and by every rule and precedent of our political life Mr. Hoover is entitled to a renomination next June and he will receive it. In my story, however, I have criticized the good taste and the truthfulness of the Hoover memorial address at Marion last summer.

Takes Hoover to Task.

"I was seated on the platform directly behind Mr. Hoover when he made his uncalled for and unfortunate remark declaring that Warren Harding had a dim realization that he had been betrayed by a few of the men whom he had trusted, and that these betrayals contributed to his collapse and death.

"How utterly false this statement was I have clearly set forth, and I have no apologies to make on this important point.

"The time approaches for a real valuation of Warren G. Harding, his administration and his associates. I predict that when the last literary scavenger has uttered his dying howl against Warren G. Harding, one of the knightliest, gentlest, truest men who ever lived in the White House will emerge from the din of slander and take his rightful place in the hearts of our people.

"I have taken considerable pleasure in this book, in exploding a few fables about Harding's nomination. I have asked and answered the question, 'Who are "The Ohio Gang?"' I have told the story of Albert B. Fall, Charles R. Forbes, Thomas W. Miller, and Roxie Stinson, with but one purpose—to be truthful and fair.

"I have answered the question of the real relations between President Harding and his wife. I draw the veil from the so-called mystery of his death and the reader can judge whether Florence Kling Harding, his noble wife, was capable of murdering the man she worshiped, as related by the unspeakable liar and character assassin, Gaston B. Means."

Bill Filed to Foreclose on Former Capone Hotel

A bill to foreclose the Metropole hotel, 2300 South Michigan avenue, former headquarters of the Capone gang, to satisfy a $231 judgment, was filed yesterday in the Circuit court by the National Casualty company. The company obtained the judgment in the Municipal court for the balance due it on a workman's compensation insurance policy covering the hotel employés which the company wrote.

British Scoff at Paying U. S. Debt by Ceding Colonies

LONDON, Dec. 28.—(AP)—The suggestion by Congressman Louis T. McFadden that England pay part of her debt to the United States by giving up colonial possessions close to that country met with a cool reception here.

There was no official comment but one responsible person said "The time is long past when loyal British subjects can be ceded to a foreign power for a monetary consideration."

What might be considered typical of the British opinion was a statement by Sir Harry Britain, who until recently was a member of the house of commons.

"Can't Barter Human Beings."

"I should think," said he, "that the first consideration would be for the people in the British colonies—the Jamaicans for instance. Governments can't barter human beings. I know that British subjects in the West Indies have a strong feeling of friendship for the United States, but I don't think they would consider changing their nationality."

Sir Harry, who returned only recently from the United States, said he thought most Englishmen and Americans feel the same way about any such proposal.

"In some parts of the United States the people are having a very hard time," he said, "but I don't think any one would take very seriously a suggestion that American cities or states, which have been hit the hardest, should revert to British possessions so that those who are suffering temporarily could obtain our dole."

Papers "Identify" McFadden.

Some of the London newspapers which printed stories about Mr. McFadden's proposal identified the congressman as "The man who charged President Hoover with having sold his country by agreeing to a moratorium on war debts" and quoted an American newspaper description of Mr. McFadden as "One who has long since identified himself as a person whose statements do not require serious treatment."

Suggestion Angers Paris Press.

PARIS, Dec. 28.—(AP)—The Journal Des Debats referred today in its leading article to the suggestion by Congressman Louis T. McFadden that England and France and England pay part of their debts to the United States by ceding their colonial possessions in waters close to that country.

"Never before," said the article, "have Americans been so badly informed on Europe and so badly disposed toward their former associates. It would be imprudent therefore to count on their spirit of justice and their sense of realities. It is regrettable, but that is the way it is."

Such statements as that by Mr. McFadden make all the more apparent the necessity for a conference between Premier Laval and Prime Minister MacDonald of England regarding reparations and debts, the article said.

The decision to hold the meeting in Chicago was made by the boards of directors of the Radio Wholesalers' association and the National Federation of Radio Associations. Thousands of radio wholesalers and dealers, factory executives and engineers will attend the trade and public show at the Coliseum and the convention sessions at the Congress hotel on Jan. 13, 19, and 20.

JAPANESE PUSH ON TO CHINCHOW; CHINESE RETREAT

Bitter Fighting Rages in 20 Mile Advance.

BULLETIN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Dec. 29.—(Tuesday.)—Dispatches from Tawa, Manchuria, today said that the Japanese cavalry is cutting off the retreat of the Chinese at Pashan and that a major battle is expected by noon. The Japanese began their second day offensive at 5 a. m. Chinese troops at Chinchow have been offered rewards of $50 each if they hold their position for 24 hours, it is reported. The reward for the capture of an enemy flag is $1,000.

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Dec. 28.—The Japanese army began its long threatened offensive today and advanced twenty miles from Yingkow to Tawa in its march on Chinchow. Despite bitter resistance by the Chinese and weather 35 degrees below zero, the Japanese swept aside the first regular Chinese troops they have come into contact with in several weeks.

The Japanese offensive is expected to last several days. Japanese army headquarters refused to make public the drive's objective, but it's generally believed that it will include the important city of Chinchow.

Though the Chinese troops are putting up a stubborn resistance, the Japanese with their cavalry, airplanes, infantry and artillery brushed their foes aside. The only city between the Japanese and Chinchow is Kowpangtze, an important railroad center on the branch line of the Peiping-Mukden railway and 40 miles from Chinchow.

Japanese Halt for Night.

It is not expected that the Japanese troops will experience much difficulty in capturing this city.

The Japanese troops, said to number about 6,000, are clad in goatskins to withstand the bitter cold.

Upon reaching Tawa, Lieut. Gen. Jiro Tamon, leader of the Japanese expedition which captured Tsitsihar, ordered the offensive halted for the night. Bombing planes were sent ahead to Kowpangtze to scout the enemy positions and drop bombs on the Chinese forces.

Shortly before midnight, Gen. Shigeru Honjo, commander of the Japanese forces in Manchuria, ordered the offensive resumed at dawn. Panshan, which is the next station above Tawa, is tomorrow's objective. On Wednesday, the objective is Huchiawopu, 10 miles northwest of Panshan, and Thursday it is the Kowpangtze railroad junction itself.

Chinese Await Marchers.

Japanese military strategists tonight declared that the Chinese regular soldiers at Chinchow exceed 35,000, assisted by 30,000 bandits and 8,000 irregular cavalry.

Army scouts tonight reported that at least 3,000 uniformed Chinese are intrenched at Panshan and are presumably awaiting the Japanese advance. Aviators also reported that they had bombed two Chinese armored trains beyond Panshan, which is 40 miles northwest of Yingkow.

With Gen. Tamon's forces pushing the Chinese north, Japanese reinforcements tonight are preparing to leave Mukden at daybreak for Hsingmingtun, where they will begin a march southward towards Kowpangtze in the hope of pinning the Chinese between the two Japanese lines.

The total strength of the Japanese military forces now in Manchuria is estimated to be more than 30,000 regulars. This is nearly double the treaty limit, which the Japanese no longer consider as binding. The additional troops were brought to Mukden from Korea.

Chinese "First" to Attack.

An official Japanese communique tonight said a force of 2,000 Chinese, both regulars and irregulars, launched an attack on Japanese forces at 9 a. m. today.

The Chinese, it was stated, used field artillery and trench mortars. The main Chinese force operated from the village of Shintien, about two miles north of Tienchwangtai, while another Chinese force, according to the communique, launched another attack against the Japanese from the village of Sanghiatse.

The fighting lasted several hours, according to the Japanese report, which said the Chinese were unable to withstand the Japanese artillery and air attacks and retreated, the main Chinese body heading northwest along the railway while another section fled to the southeast. One section of the Chinese military force, which had fallen back, reorganized, however, and attacked the Japanese again at Newchwangtze, close to the Japanese base, Tienchwangtai, and about twelve miles from Yingkow, the Japanese announced.

The Japanese claim this force was also dispersed. The Japanese troops then pursued the main Chinese army and overtook it at the village of Hsakwang, located southwest of the railway. After two hours of fighting in the snow and ice the Japanese occupied the position at 2 p. m.

The decision to start the offensive from Yingkow toward Kowpangtze was reached at a conference of staff officers here last night. The zero hour was set for 9 a. m. today.

The Japanese forces, it was agreed, were to be preceded by airplanes and two troops of cavalry, the main Japanese force consisting of three regiments of infantry and one battalion of field artillery. It was announced that the army's first objective was to eliminate the Chinese bandit general, Lao Pei-fu, whose nickname is "Old North Wind." He is said to have 3,000 troops in the Yingkow district.

Lin Sen Chinese President.

NANKING, Dec. 28.—(AP)—A government was set up today to succeed the administration that walked out on China a week ago.

Lin Sen, 67 year old president of the legislative yuan [council], was chosen chairman of the national government, succeeding Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, who washed his hands of Chinese politics and retired to his farm in the north.

Lin Sen was selected at a plenary session of the Kuomintang [Nationalist party] committee, in which both Nanking and Canton political leaders took part. Sun Fo, former minister of railways and a member of the Cantonese faction, was named to the presidency of the executive yuan, a post roughly corresponding to the premiership in European nations.

Only One Military Leader.

Chiang Kai-shek, whose fall from power resulted from pressure by the Cantonese, received one of the nine places of the standing committee of the central executive committee. Whether he would agree to participate remained a question, as nothing has been heard from him since he departed for his native town, saying he was through with public office.

Chang Chi was chosen president of the legislative yuan and Chen Cheng vice president. Tai Chi-toa was named president of the examination yuan, Yu Yu-jen president of the control yuan, and C. C. Wu president of the judicial yuan. All these executives are civilians. Among the vice presidents there is only one military leader.

ACQUIT COLL AND PAL OF GANG BABY KILLING CHARGE

New York, Dec. 28.—[Special.]—By order of the court, Vincent Coll, gang leader, and his lieutenant, Frank Giordano, were acquitted today of the "baby killing" charge on which they were tried for first degree murder.

Assistant District Attorney James T. Neary requested the dismissal, saying his case against the two gangsters had collapsed when his chief witness, George Brecht, admitted committing perjury on the witness stand.

After directing the jury in General Sessions court to acquit the defendants, Judge Joseph E. Corrigan ordered Brecht taken to Bellevue hospital for observation.

Coll on his way from the courtroom grinned and waved his hand to the crowd.

"I've been charged with all kinds of crimes," said Coll, "but baby killing was the limit. I am glad the judge instructed the jury to turn me out."

COLLEGE 'THRILL' RELIGION FOUND MENACE BY DEAN

Assails Attitude Taught by Many Schools.

Discussing the religious influence in certain modern schools, which he referred to as glorified playgrounds, the Rev. Thomas Egan, S. J., dean of the college of arts and sciences at Loyola university, declared last night that "religion to many students is just a gigolo, used for a thrill when one is surfeited by the semestral life, well described as a summation of 'giggle, gaggle, gobble and gallop.'"

Some of these educational institutions, Father Egan asserted, furnish environment inimical to religious thought and conduct. He declared that the university football coach is the most autocratic, the university religious leader most apologetic, and remarked that "even freshmen reveal more knowledge of Rockne than of any other campus celebrity."

Addresses Workers' Conference.

Dean Egan's talk was given at the annual dinner of the Church Workers in Universities of the North Central Region, in Judson court, new men's dormitory at 60th street and Ellis avenue, University of Chicago. Dean Shailer Mathews of the university divinity school also spoke. Attending were delegates from fifteen states, present for the three-day conference of the Church Workers.

Dean Egan opened his talk with a reference to college "as, in the words of Dean Gauss of Princeton, a kind of glorified playground." A university preacher once said, the priest continued, that whereas he spoke to deserted benches in his own men's college, he always addressed a large number of his own undergraduates when he held services in a neighboring women's college.

The clergyman said he deplored the "obsequious surrender of theology as the queen of the sciences by the professed advocates of religious thought to the blatant boastings of pettifoggers who compensate for their scientific ineptitude by a flag at the Deity. "These emotional attacks are born of intellectual sterility," he added.

Discusses Religious Tolerance.

"Religious tolerance has degenerated into an abject willingness to accept any error, be it but labeled scientific," asserted Father Egan. "Too often religious leaders abdicate their authority and become human weather vanes as pliable to other interests as Polonius to Hamlet."

Here he referred to the football coach and the university preacher. "Of all men at a university, the coach is the most autocratic," he said. "He may camouflage under the notion of developing initiative, but he exacts implicit obedience to his orders. And the students approach almost unanimity in their approval.

"The most arrogant instructor on the campus is the most respected. While the coach dogmatizes the religious leader apologizes. The students have accepted them at their own evaluation.

Cites Spiritual Starvation.

"Spiritual starvation has been the strongest force in making the college a glorified playground. The students didn't create this situation; they drifted into it. The removal of the idea of compulsion from religion has left it in the rôle of a fraternity or a political party. We may any day expect the practices of the best people to be edited as religion's book of etiquite, to compensate for the loss of the old fashioned Bible."

The mysticism of success, America's own religion, said the clergyman, is a potent factor in building a religious tower of Babel, "now very high, and, I think, toppling." He asserted that success in any line is regarded as a license to speak on religion with the finality of Mahomet. A successful man, he said, may not depart from the public eye until he has prophesied on immortality.

Genius Near Insanity.

"If not novel, it is not news," commented Dean Egan. "Truly, genius is but a step from insanity. You will find an impersonator of God in every madhouse."

Universities, he asserted, fall under the influence of the super-business man. He has become monarch. By his largesses, he said, he too often directs the voice of the church, and has a word on what may or may not be taught in universities.

"As a nation, in gold we trust," asserted Dean Egan. "We have taken our trust from God and put it in the dollar and the dollar has taken wings and now we have neither God nor gold."

Dean Mathews in his talk said that the "human race is more than a mere peripatetic laboratory in which we are driven about by sex instinct." He said that God has not gone into a receivership, with religious psychology as the receiver.

SHERWOOD HELD IN CONTEMPT BY NEW YORK COURT

Aid of Mayor Walker Is Facing Fine.

New York, Dec. 28.—[Special.]—Russell T. Sherwood, long missing business agent of Mayor "Jimmy" Walker, was adjudged in contempt of court today for failing to appear before the Hofstadter legislative committee in response to a subpoena. Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Churchill announced that he would fix the amount of the fine "speedily"—within a day or two.

The maximum of $100,000 has been asked.

Samuel Seabury, counsel to the committee which is investigating the city administration, told Justice Churchill that so far he has sequestered about $20,000 in property belonging to Sherwood, and knows that he has a house at Suffern, but believes it is not very valuable.

Wants Others to Pay.

It is not Sherwood himself whom Mr. Seabury wants to have forced to pay high, but "those who are keeping him out of the jurisdiction." He said he reiterated his statement that Sherwood is Mayor James J. Walker's business agent, and that he is staying away from the committee hearings because he "knows it is the wish of the mayor and others" that he do so.

The mayor's part in Sherwood's absence makes it a scandal and a disgrace to the city, said Mr. Seabury.

It would be cheap at $20,000 to keep the witness away, Mr. Seabury declared, saying that certainly those who are conniving at his absence are going to recompense him for the loss of his job, the inconvenience, etc.

"A mere call from the mayor would bring the man here," he told Justice Churchill. "He is not staying away because of any fear for himself, but because Mr. Walker wants him to stay away.

PLAN OF NELSON TO RESCUE BANK TOLD AT TRIAL

Ward C. Castle Testifies About Meeting.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

Ward C. Castle, vice president of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company of Chicago, testifying as a state's witness yesterday in the trial of State Auditor Oscar Nelson before Judge Edward Shurtleff at Woodstock, described a plan approved by Mr. Nelson for the rescue of the Waukegan State bank.

Auditor Nelson is charged with misfeasance on the ground that he should have closed the Waukegan bank in the fall of 1930, and that he permitted it to remain open until June, 1931 while the assets rightfully belonging to the depositors were being dissipated.

Castle Is Questioned.

Mr. Castle, under the questioning of State's Attorney A. V. Smith, testified that he was executive vice president of the National Bank of the Republic, later merged with the Central Trust company. The witness was asked if he knew George Woodruff, and replied that he did, that Mr. Woodruff was chairman of the board of the National Republic bank. Mr. Woodruff, with Mr. Nelson and three others, is under indictment in another case charging a conspiracy to defraud the depositors of the Waukegan bank.

The witness described a meeting in the state auditor's Chicago office held on Oct. 16, 1930, to which Mr. Nelson had summoned the directors of the Waukegan State bank. Mr. Castle said Mr. Woodruff, who headed a group of men identified with the National Bank of the Republic owning 795 shares of stock in the Waukegan bank, had asked him to attend the meeting.

Told to describe what took place at the meeting, which already had been told in detail by the Waukegan directors of the bank, Mr. Castle said that Auditor Nelson informed the directors that the bank needed additional money to take up worthless loans.

Proposes Stock Assessment.

"As I remember," said Mr. Castle, "I proposed a stock assessment as the most logical way to handle the matter. It would fall evenly on all the stockholders. Carl Stenger [president of the Waukegan bank] took exception to the proposal and said that the mere thought was like waving a red flag to a bull.

"He said the people in Waukegan, learning of the assessment, would lose confidence in the bank, and that an assessment wasn't to be thought of. I said I was quite sure the large stockholders I was speaking for would agree to pay their share of an assessment.

"Stenger replied that some of the local stockholders couldn't afford to pay an assessment, and asked if we would help them with loans. I said yes, we wanted to be constructive in our help, and would make loans on good collateral."

Woodruff at Meeting.

The witness was asked by the state's attorney if he saw Mr. Woodruff at the auditor's office that day.

"Yes, in Mr. Nelson's office. There were several other officials of the National Bank of the Republic there. Mr. Nelson told Woodruff that he had gone over the examiners' report on the Waukegan bank, and that more money ought to be put into the business. Nelson said the directors were unwilling to pay an assessment and that it had been suggested in the conference that another way out would be for the Chicago stockholders holding the 795 shares to turn in their stock.

"Carl Stenger had stated he could sell the stock to his friends and associates, and Nelson said that the proceeds could be used to clear up any questionable assets in the bank.

Would Prefer Assessment.

"Mr. Woodruff said that as far as he and his associate stockholders were concerned, it would be cheaper for them to have an assessment, but that perhaps the other plan would help out. He said he would have to take it up with the other stockholders and would do so the next day."

Other witnesses have stated that the Chicago stockholders did agree to the plan and assigned their stock to the bank. Stenger made only a few sales, however, and the plan was not helpful.

On the face of Mr. Carstle's testimony—and the same is true of that of practically all of the state's testimony thus far in the case—Mr. Nelson was pictured as laboring earnestly to save the Waukegan bank, and Mr. Woodruff and his associates were described as philanthropically disposed in the same direction.

State to Charge Fraud.

However, State's Attorney Smith in his opening statement said he would prove that Nelson and the Woodruff group were in a conspiracy to allow the Chicago stockholders to "get out from under," that practically all of the valuable assets of the bank were taken over by the National Bank of the Republic just before the Waukegan bank closed. The state's attorney said he would show later by other witnesses that Nelson and Woodruff were acting with fraudulent motives.

At the conclusion of the day's session Prosecutor Smith sought for a second time to introduce into evidence the reports made by Mr. Nelson's examiners on the investigations they had made of the Waukegan bank. The auditor's lawyers repeated their objections and the judge repeated his earlier ruling.

Judge Gives Ruling.

"Before the reports are admissible," Judge Shurtleff said, "the state must prove that the bank was insolvent on the date of the directors' conference with the defendant, or that its capital was impaired, and that Mr. Nelson, knowing this to be a fact, then wilfully and corruptly failed or refused to take the remedies suggested in the law. When you prove that, Mr. Smith, the records are admissible as showing, if they do show it, that Mr. Nelson had knowledge of the bank's condition."

Col. Smith later said he had desired to have the documents introduced in evidence at this time, but that he was not embarrassed by the ruling, and that he would proceed, as he had intended before the ruling, with the evidence which he states will prove Mr. Nelson did wilfully and corruptly keep an insolvent bank open, thus committing the offence of misfeasance.

$3,000,000 Shift in Garard Assets Upheld by Master

The transfer of securities with a book value of approximately $3,000,000 from the vault of the Garard Investment Trust a few hours before it went into the hands of a federal receiver in March, 1930, was upheld in a report by Master in Chancery George E. Goreman made public yesterday. The report was filed recently in the Circuit court.

GEO. E. GORMAN.

The securities were transferred to a vault of the Garard Trust and Savings bank, which was placed in the hands of a state receiver a few days later. The federal receiver claimed that the securities should be returned to the federal court, but the master's report held that the transfer was made in good faith and within the law.

Called Aid for Purchasers.

The decision, according to Attorney Joseph B. Fleming, representing a bondholders' protective committee, protects purchasers of bonds sold by the Garard enterprises on Chicago real estate.

The Garard bank has paid its depositors in full and paid its stockholders $70 on each $100 share with a prospect of a further dividend.

On March 1, 1930, according to the report, trustees of the Garard Trust decided to turn over securities with a book value of $2,952,750 to the Garard bank to protect purchasers of bonds on real estate. The transfer was made from one vault to the other about 10:30 a. m. Master in Chancery Gorman reported that "the transfers were made by these trustees in good faith to secure bona fide creditors."

About noon of the same day a petition for a receiver of the Trust was filed in the federal court. A receiver was appointed, who took possession of the offices of the Trust about 1:30 p. m. The receiver made the discovery about 3:30 p. m. of the transfer of securities that morning. A suit was filed in the Circuit court asking for the return of the securities, and it was this suit which was referred to the master in chancery.

Creditors Oppose Recovery.

Creditors of the Trust did not join the federal receiver in the petition, but sought to prevent the federal receiver from recovering the property involved in the transfer, thus assenting to the transfer, according to the report.

Circuit Judge Michael Feinberg yesterday began his investigation of the Sheridan Trust and Savings bank which closed with deposits of $5,500,000 due to more than 40,000 depositors.

David H. Jackson, head of the state securities department, and his brother, Andrew O. Jackson, told the judge that they would pay 25 per cent of their joint debt of $1,206 immediately and the balance within two weeks. Their offer was accepted.

Officials of radio station WIBO asked for and obtained a continuance of two weeks on the promise that a substantial payment would be made within that time on their debt of $42,000 to the bank.

Two Claim Poverty.

Two other witnesses, once well to do, said they were now penniless. Louis Bromberg, 4151 North Troy street, president of the Milford Motor company, admitted that he gave his net worth as $386,000 in a financial statement last January and insisted that he is now unable to pay anything on his debt to the bank of $6,527. He was told to return today with records of his company.

Stanley C. Chadwick, 4945 North California avenue, formerly in the real estate business and now vice president of the Downtown Parking Garages, Inc., said his net worth in January, 1930, was $145,000, but declared these assets had "vanished into thin air." He owed the bank $15,841 and asserted he was unable to pay anything on the debt. He was on the witness stand when court adjourned until today.

BANK FUGITIVE HORVATT GIVES UP AFTER YEAR

He Faces Theft and Liquor Indictments.

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Andrew J. Horvatt, one time Binghamton banker by day and reputed bootleg chief by night, surrendered to New York troopers today. He was hurried from Sidney, in Delaware county, where he gave himself up, to Albany for a conference with Attorney General John J. Bennett Jr.

Horvatt, who has played hide and seek with federal and state officers for more than a year, is charged with looting the State Bank of Binghamton, a wage earners' depository, of more than $2,000,000. The federal government indicted him for liquor conspiracy.

Genial and active civic worker and a go-getter in business, Horvatt, now about 55, once was a millionaire. He had less than $30 in his pockets when he submitted to arrest. He was, however, sprucely dressed. The Rev. Joseph Madigan, a Catholic priest of Sidney, accompanied Horvatt and Trooper Sergt. R. L. O'Hanley to Albany. It was understood that Father Madigan arranged for the surrender.

Troopers on His Heels.

State troops have been at Horvatt's heels for weeks. He sent word he would surrender at Schenectady last Saturday, but he failed to show up, fearful, it was understood, that a wrathful depositor or a rum runner with whom he was alleged to have done business would also be there.

The state entered the bank investigation last September when Gov. Roosevelt superseded the Broome county district attorney and assigned the attorney general to the case. Horvatt's brother, Michael, and two other employés of the bank were convicted or pleaded guilty to charges of irregularity. Horvatt himself was indicted on 38 counts of forgery.

Horvatt, son of a Czecho-Slovakian saloonkeeper in the old First ward of Binghamton, built his bank on the saloon site. The institution prospered; it trebled its depositors and doubled its deposits. On Dec. 15, 1930, Horvatt disappeared from Binghamton.

Bank Short $2,000,000.

A few days after the disappearance of the bank president the bank closed its doors and its books failed to balance by something over $2,000,000. Safety deposit boxes had been ransacked and Christmas club money was missing. The bank had energetically encouraged Christmas clubs among its working class depositors. It also had solicited and obtained the accounts of several churches and many church organizations. All of this money was gone.

Panic-stricken customers of the bank needing mony for Christmas purchases stormed its closed doors demanding their money.

Investigation marked Horvatt the head of a Binghamton liquor ring and the chief of rum running operations across the New York-Pennsylvania state line.

Home Burned, Parents Go to Son's and Are Arrested

Marion, Ill., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—After raiding the home of Harley Rightnower two weeks ago at Johnston City, Sheriff G. J. Frick raided the place again yesterday and arrested his father and mother, Bennie and Mattie Rightnower after finding twenty-six quarts of home brew. The parents had moved into the son's home after their own home was burned. Harley Rightnower has been sentenced to the state prison farm at Vandalia.

GIRL ROBBED OF COAT.

A bandit, armed with a revolver, stripped a seal skin coat valued at $200 from Dorothy Siegel, 23 years old, 1866 South Ridgeway avenue, and took $2 in cash early yesterday at Ridgeway avenue and 19th street.

RADIO STATIONS, MUSICIANS GET SET FOR STRIKE

Programs Will Continue, Broadcasters Say.

Battle lines were drawn yesterday in the threatened strike of Chicago radio musicians over rejection of the demand of their union for increased wages and control of electrical devices in the studios.

JAS. C. PETRILLO.

At 4 p. m. James C. Petrillo, president of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, summoned to his headquarters the 42 organists, piano soloists, and electrola operators hitherto uninstructed on the strike.

Told to Join Strike.

Petrillo told the group to walk out at midnight New Year's eve, joining the 400 studio bandsmen previously ordered out. The musicians heard him in silence, accepted his remarks without applause, and dispersed. Their salaries, now fixed at a minimum of $30 a week, will cease Thursday night if the strike plans are carried out.

At the same time Attorney Joseph B. Fleming, counsel for the fourteen stations in the Chicago Broadcasters' association, anounced that, strike or no strike, the radio programs would be carried on. Managers of the stations will meet at 10 o'clock this morning to plan their strategy.

"Whether the strike goes on or not the broadcasters are confident of their ability to continue to present programs satisfactory to the radio audience," Fleming declared.

Deny Any Negotiations.

An intimation by Petrillo that managers of several stations might seek individual negotiations with the union elicited a statement from Fleming that the broadcasters stood firmly united.

H. Leslie Atlass, vice president in charge of the Chicago office of the Columbia Broadcasting system, branded as false a report his chain was treating for an individual settlement. As for the National Broadcasting company, it was explained that this chain owns a substantial interest in two of the principal stations of the broadcasters' group, WENR and WMAQ.

A possibility that the controversy may still be settled peaceably arose when Petrillo announced that Joseph N. Weber, president of the National Federation of Musicians, was coming here from New York tonight or tomorrow. It was held possible that Weber's arrival might mark a renewal of negotiations.

REFUSES RETURN OF MINE SLAYING TRIAL TO HARLAN

Judge to Find Funds for Defense Witnesses.

Mount Sterling, Ky., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—A motion to remand to Harlan county the next of a series of murder cases growing out of disorders in that coal mining community was denied by the court tonight. It had been argued that the change of venue from Harlan county had deprived the defendant of his rights.

Charging that the defendant, William M. Hightower, president of the Evarts miners union local, in Harlan county, was unable to get his witnesses here because of the expense involved, John M. Robsion, his chief counsel, filed affidavits before Circuit Judge Henry R. Prewitt, in Montgomery Circuit court before today, seeking a return of the case to Harlan county for trial.

The affidavits allege that the defense witnesses are poor, that they are unable to pay their way here, have nothing to eat after they arrive, and no shelter. The affidavits sought to have the state pay for seventy-five witnesses for the defense as they did in the trial of W. B. Jones, secretary of the union, who was convicted here December 10 and given a life sentence in the penitentiary for the murder of Jim Daniels, deputy sheriff, the same crime for which Hightower is before the court. A continuance was also sought, and this, too, was denied.

Judge Prewitt declined to order the state to defray the witnesses' expenses.

A lot of folks in Detroit may be thankful that so many New Yorkers can afford to think more about compression than depression.

When we say "New Yorkers" we don't mean the whole ten million people who comprise the New York market. And we don't mean Manhattan Island especially, either—although quite a few Manhattanites will chase the wolf in a 16-cylinder car if they ever chase him at all.

We mean such places as Bronxville, Pelham, Larchmont—Greenwich—Montclair and the Oranges—Long Island's North Shore—and certain parts of Brooklyn, Queens, Manhattan and the Bronx.

There are the people who have been buying cars just as they did before Wall Street taught the rest of us how far it's safe to stretch a shoe-string. In the sections of city and suburbs where family incomes average over $5000 (way, way over, in thousands of cases) are more than 600,000 families. And there are more than 120,000 families who read the Herald Tribune, nearly twenty per cent of the depression-proof buyers reached by this newspaper alone.

Another 190,000 Herald Tribune readers live in districts where incomes average between $2500 to $5000. If they aren't all buying cars just now, they're mostly prospects.

We do not reach many of the 400,000 New York families who live in districts where the average family income is less than $2500. Only 5% read the Herald Tribune. So there isn't much waste circulation for motor car advertisers to pay for!

The New York Herald Tribune's total circulation is 325,432 on week-days; 439,106 on Sundays. (Average for six months ending September 30, 1931.)

AMERICAN DEFENSE AT GENEVA.

Mr. Hoover's appointment of Dr. Mary Woolley, president of Mount Holyoke college, to be a delegate of the United States in the coming conference on armament limitation cannot be dismissed as a political gesture of significance only to Americans. In that aspect it is further evidence of the influence exercised upon Mr. Hoover by the pacifist and internationalist organizations which have in recent years weakened and perverted American foreign policy, the conduct of the nation's defenses and of its international interests. If Dr. Woolley's membership in these organizations means anything, she favors the reduction of the American military and naval defenses regardless of what reductions are made by other powers, and whatever influence she can exercise at Geneva will be in that direction.

That influence, we hope, will be negligible so far as our delegation is concerned. We cannot think it will impress Ambassador Dawes, Senator Swanson, or Ambassador Gibson. But that the President of the United States has thought fit to send her as an American delegate will, without question, affect the attitude of other governments. They will interpret it as a sign that the President of the United States is a pacifist and favorable to Dr. Woolley's point of view on American defense; that is, to the policy of reducing our preparedness as fast as possible to nil. The implication for foreign diplomacy must be that any effort our delegation makes for resisting disproportionate reduction of the American navy and army in comparison with those of England, Japan, France, and Italy is not to be taken at its face value.

For this inference the way has already been prepared by the interview given a few weeks ago by Admiral Pratt, chief of naval operations, member of the American delegation at the London naval conference, and adviser to the President on naval policy. Admiral Pratt asserted, and has not been contradicted by the President or any one in superior authority, that the American government had never intended to build up to the London treaty provisions. In other words, that the negotiations of the American delegation to London for parity were largely a pretense.

Thus our delegation will enter the Geneva conference with the understanding among the other conferees that its demands for proportionate limitation, its objections to terms and measures pressed by other delegations in the interest of their own countries, and in short anything it purports to assert on behalf of the maintenance of America's relative naval and military strength are to be taken in the Pickwickian sense.

Thus, before the American delegates have packed their bags, their sincerity has been impugned and their task, if that task is to include the protection of American means for the defense of its interests through its own strength, is made not merely difficult but virtually impossible.

Mr. Hoover's attitude toward national defense is unique in the history of the presidency. It is of vital importance to the nation that it should be fully realized. It has been obscured because Mr. Hoover has given lip service to the principles of defense which the American people hold. But his actions have belied his words.

WITH APPLAUSE FROM OXFORD.

We have received, at the instance of some anonymous friend, a volume on modern Japan, written by Dr. I. Nitobe and published as one of a series entitled "The Modern World," under the editorship of the Rt. Hon. H. A. L. Fisher of Oxford, who contributes a foreword of approval. Turning the pages of Dr. Nitobe's book at random we find the following under the caption "The Washington Conference":

"The war, ostensibly waged to end war, had, like all other wars, the effect of whetting thirst for another. With unprecedented rapidity, naval armament was augmented in every country commanding a sea. The most conspicuous of the aspirants was the United States. Suddenly she became a militant power. Her budget increased by leaps and bounds. The pre-war sum of $80,000,000 dollars doubled in 1917. Next year it mounted to 18 billion dollars, and in 1919 to over 25 billions. Of this huge sum, one-fourth was devoted to warlike purposes. However, even America could not continue long at this ratio."

If this is a fair sample of Dr. Nitobe's discussion of international events, the approval of his distinguished Oxford editor has a special interest for us. The passage asserts first that thirst for another war raised by the great war resulted in an augmentation of naval armament "with unprecedented rapidity," and that the "most conspicuous of the aspirants was the United States." To support this allegation Dr. Nitobe writes that "in 1917 our budget doubled, that next year [1918] it mounted to 18 billion dollars and in 1919 to 25 billions, of which one-fourth was for warlike purposes." Dr. Nitobe seems to ignore the rather obvious fact that these increases of public expenditure were brought about by our entrance into the war, and are not very impressive support for his assertion that Americans or their government were enjoying a thirst for another war. We do not know how Dr. Nitobe defines "warlike purposes," but if he refers to expenditures upon the military and naval establishments he will find by reference to our treasury report that the war department expenditures are given as $9,201,543,000 for 1919. In that year we were engaged in maintaining, transporting home and demobilizing something like four million men. In 1920 the war department expenditures had fallen to $1,044,967,000. Our naval expenditures were about two billion in 1919 and had fallen to $629,853,000 in 1920. Perhaps Dr. Nitobe would add $693,573,000 for pensions in both services for 1919, and $506,584,000 for 1920, and we will point out that in the war department expenditures the amount spent upon aviation is not obtainable by us, but the naval totals for aviation were included above and taken by themselves show a decrease from $132,588,770 in 1919 to $24,872,777.

What becomes of Dr. Nitobe's assertion that the United States, athirst for another war, was augmenting its war preparations and, not being able "to continue at this scale," was constrained to call the Washington conference?

If this passage is a specimen of Dr. Nitobe's use of fact and of the logic of his inferences we cannot follow his other comment upon the international experiences of Japan with the admiration his British editor expresses for his work. The passage ignores the conditions which disparage his inferences and presents a theory of American conduct and motive as lacking in support from his logic as it is in candor, accuracy or knowledge of American national character. The right honorable editor's approval seems hardly less peculiar.

MR. NYE'S HOUSE OF LORDS.

Senator Nye has presented the senate with the ostensible reason for the extraordinary activities of the Nye committee in its interference in state elections, for and against candidates, with the functions of Hawkshaw, Dogberry, the inquisition, and the king's bench. The senator and his associates, in spreading themselves over the political scene wherever a candidate had their favor or one had their disapproval, were gathering information to be used in proposing legislation. That writ of authority is being used to justify everything from constabulary to star chamber action.

Mr. Nye now proposes the legislation in amendments to the corrupt practices act. These amendments would limit the amount of money to be spent for a candidate for President to $250,000 for nomination and $5,000,000 for election. A candidate for the national house of representatives would be restricted to $10,000 and a candidate for the senate to $50,000. Congressional supervision would be extended to primary elections for these offices and through the conventions to the final elections. That is, the federal congress would pretty thoroughly substitute itself for the states in the control of elections except in the matter of costs.

The expenditures to which candidates for congress would be restricted would leave federal patronage the dominant influence in each congressional district and state and the sitting members of congress would be relieved from the fear of an opposing organization privately financed. The public money would have a fairly free hand in returning the sitting member. His constituency would be sealed unto him.

A $50,000 limit for expenses in a campaign against a United States senator would about make the senate a close corporation for all time. That, with the power of the senators to judge the qualifications of their members, as such power has been exercised, would give the United States a house of lords. And with the restrictions placed upon candidates for nomination for the presidency it might also easily give the new American lords the privilege of selecting the President.

Constitutional changes without due process move rapidly these days to convert the American government from what it was intended to be into something no one could recognize by a study of the original. Mr. Nye would hurry the transformation and establish a little monarchy in Washington in the name of good works and public benefit and morality.

Editorial of the Day

[New York Times.]

In its efforts to cut down costs the federal government is handicapped by certain expenditures in the nature of fixed charges. There are four chief items of this sort. The government must pay principal and interest on the national debt; it must administer trust funds in accordance with the laws which established them; it must pay pensions already granted and provide care for disabled veterans, and it must make tax refunds where they are due. These four items account for a total of $2,263,000,000 in the budget for 1932-'33. Of the entire cost of government, 55 per cent is thus represented by mandatory payments. Any economies must be made in the remaining 45 per cent.

While this narrows the opportunities for saving, there is still plenty of room in the "movable" 45 per cent of the budget for drastic economies, if the administration and congress were of a mind to make them. Fixed charges have changed comparatively little in recent years. It is the "movable" items that have been increasing. In 1928-'29 the government spent $1,568,000,000 outside of its fixed charges. It now proposes to spend $1,848,000,000 in 1932-'33 despite the enormous deficit of last year and the present year. Large increases have been made in aid to veterans and in the building program put forward to relieve unemployment. But despite reductions in some items other costs have also expanded. If we compare the President's budget estimates for 1932-'33 with actual expenditures for 1928-'29 we find expenses of the army and navy up $19,000,000; aids to agriculture up $18,000,000; aids to aviation, including losses on contract air mail routes, up $14,000,000; aids to the merchant marine, including losses on transportation of foreign mail in American vessels, up $44,000,000, etc. No doubt much may be said in favor of some of these increases. But at a time when drastic economies are being made in the management of private business we find the government proposing to spend approximately $360,000,000 more in a period of depression than in the prosperous year 1928-'29.

A still more striking comparison may be made by going back a few years. The government has asked taxpayers to return to the rates of 1924. What would happen if the taxpayers asked their government to return to its own budget for the same year? In this case, $606,000,000 would be cut from the estimates submitted to congress by the President. This is two-thirds as much as the administration hopes to raise by increasing taxes.

CLEANLINESS—A REMEDY FOR WORMS.

Some one asks for the best worm medicine. Perhaps the answer to this is—Hygiene, meaning personal cleanliness and cleanliness of one's surroundings. Clean hands outrank all other measures. In the same group belong convenient, comfortable facilities for washing the hands, convenient and clean toilet facilities, and clean food. So far as hookworm is concerned the wearing of shoes belongs in the group. These provisions are very much more important than any worm medicine of any sort.

Dr. A. E. Keller supplies basic proof of this, based on a study of nearly 500 children in an institution located near Nashville. He examined the entire group for worms and found a considerable proportion infested. Some had round worms, others whip worms, hookworms, thread worms, or a species of tapeworm.

Inspection showed that the institution had running water and water-borne sewage. Toilet conveniences were good. The premises were clean. For a year an effort was made to train the children in habits of personal cleanliness and in maintaining everything sanitary. The children were given no worm medicine. Neither hookworm nor tapeworm remedies were made use of.

At the end of one year the children were again examined for worms. Not one child was found to have ordinary round worms, and the improvement in regard to other worms was nearly as great. The results with hookworm had been three-fourths as good as was the case with round worms.

The demonstration showed that the only medicine for worms the average infested child needs is cleanliness in good dosage. On the other hand, it has been shown that if a child is successfully treated for worms with worm medicine, but habits of cleanliness are not changed, within a year the child will be just where he was before the worm medicine was given. This evidence of two sorts is the basis for the statement that the best worm medicine is cleanliness.

If the party asking this question insists on an answer limited to drugs, there is need to know which sort of worm is of interest. Chenopodium is best for round worms, and male fern for tapeworms. However, there are several other remedies for each kind of worm, each remedy being almost as efficacious as those designated as "best."

PATERNITY TEST FAILS.

A Wife and Mother writes: Is it possible to determine paternity by blood tests or any other means, and if so, where could I go to obtain the benefits of such knowledge?

REPLY.

There is no laboratory test by which the paternity of a child can be established. The blood grouping test is valueless in such cases. At most, in certain cases, it indicates that a person might or might not have been the parent of certain children. In most cases it is of even less value.

DRINK MORE WATER.

Miss T. S. writes: What is the remedy for acid in the urine?

REPLY.

Eat more potatoes and bananas. Eat less meat, eggs, cereal, and bread. Drink more water.

NOT RELATED.

N. R. G. writes: Are asthma and tuberculosis closely related? Is asthma a form of tuberculosis?

REPLY.

Asthma and tuberculosis are not related. There is an old notion that asthmatics never get consumption because the first disease protects against the second. There was little basis for this opinion. In fact, a fair number of asthmatics have been found to be consumptive also, the symptoms of the first disease masking those of the second.

Chicago, Dec. 19.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Has there been a law passed recently whereby a guest passenger in an automobile in case of an accident cannot sue the owner of the car unless he can prove the driver was willfully negligent? H. G.

Yes. Section 42 of the motor vehicle law as amended in 1931 is in part as follows: "No person riding in a motor vehicle as a guest, without payment for such ride, nor his personal representative in the event of the death of such guest, shall have a cause of action for damages against the driver or operator of such motor vehicle or its owner or his employé or agent for injury, death or loss, in case of accident, unless such accident shall have been caused by a willful and wanton misconduct of the driver or operator of such motor vehicle or its owner or his employé or agent and unless such willful and wanton misconduct contributed to the injury, death or loss for which the action is brought."

PROPERTY DESCRIPTION.

Blue Island, Ill., Dec. 15. — [Legal Friend of the People.]—I have noticed a discrepancy in the description of my lot, as described on the tax bill and that in my guaranty policy. In the former the length of the lot is given as ninety feet, while the latter says eighty feet. I have been paying taxes on these ten feet which do not belong on my lot for quite a long time. 1. Which of these two descriptions is legal? 2. What can be done to correct the matter? 3. How can I recover extra taxes paid? G. L.

1. The description in your guarantee policy is probably the right one.

2. If the number of feet is mentioned merely as an addition to another which is a complete legal description, it may be that no correction is necessary.

3. It is not clear that any extra taxes have been paid. We cannot advise you to advantage without having the wording of the two descriptions before us.

BOOK YOUR PASSAGE NOW! Strange after twelve or thirteen years of Bone Dry Prohibition that we are still obliged to run the good old water wagon again on New Year's eve. In spite of the fact that each year since the sacred eighteenth amendment was adopted we have reluctantly yielded to an overwhelming demand and trotted the old water wagon out on its old fashioned pilgrimage, we did hope that by 1932 we could drop the custom. But no! Requests pour in from every side that we give those filled with deep regret, hootch, and gin a chance to climb up on the water wagon and start the gladsome new year aright.

It is so ordered. The water wagon will leave its old dock at the waterworks tower on Boul Mich and Chicago avenue next Thursday at one minute past 12 midnight. Those who have booked passage are requested to be on hand promptly at 11:30, as this year the water wagon will not stop at request to pick up passengers at speakeasies; it would take a month for the wagon to get started if that were done. Music will be furnished by the Thirsty Three, who will play "How Dry I Am," "Little Drops of Water," "Beefsteak When Your're Hungry, Whisky When You're Dry," as well as other old time favorites. Passengers who will have to be strapped to their seats to prevent their falling off the wagon before it fairly gets started must bring their own straps.

A light collation of buttermilk will be served to all on board at 1 o'clock. The voyage, as usual, will be to Watertown, Wis., where a royal dinner will be served of iced water, watermelon, watercress, crushed ice, ice cubes, and spring water. The table service will be old Waterford ware and water lilies used exclusively as table decorations.

Get on the wagon New Year's morning! A silver water pitcher and four sections of water pipe will be given to the one who stays on the longest. Make your reservations today!

THE VENTRILOQUISTS

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

This nation has had other serious financial depressions, as the following excerpts from The Tribune files reveal. Each of these periods of hard times has been followed by periods of great prosperity.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 30.—Seven German banks which closed their doors on Saturday made application for membership in the clearing house and were received. Banks paid out limited amounts of currency and merchants are generally satisfied with the certified check basis.

Sept. 30.—There were no more suspensions of financial institutions in Chicago and bankers were somewhat optimistic that the worst is over. S. W. Rawson, president of the Union Trust company, declared he thought that, everything considered, the aspect of the commercial world in the city was brighter than it has been for days. The Union National, which had suspended previously, decided to go into voluntary liquidation and not attempt to reopen. In Philadelphia Benjamin Bullock Sons, a firm doing a business of $3,000,000 a year, suspended. In Boston some of the large manufacturing establishments have begun discharging men. Among these are the Waltham and the Howard Watch companies, which have let out a large number of their employés. In St. Louis the city council voted to issue $300,000 in city scrip.

"Business is shot to pieces," was the explanation in almost every railroad executive's office.

LONDON.—The advocates of compulsory military service for all unmarried "slackers" apparently have won the day. It is stated on excellent authority that the cabinet has virtually decided upon a modified form of conscription bill, giving the government necessary power to bring in single men and preserve Premier Asquith's pledge. Despite the fact that several of the ministers have threatened to resign if conscription is forced, there is still hope that a crisis may be averted.

CHICAGO. — Twenty-five hundred people walked quietly out of the Hopkins theater last night though the air was dense with smoke from the fire that was wrecking the old Park theater next door. There was no sign of panic. The orchestra played and on the stage a vaudeville actor never paused until the last spectator was gone. Then he and the musicians ran out of the choking atmosphere. The fire threatened for a time to destroy the entire Park theater building. The State street cable and the Alley "L" cars were tied up.

FOR CLOSING THE SCHOOLS.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—If the schools are closed after the holidays the teacher will not have to pay carfare or buy lunch. She will not have to endanger her health by going out in winter weather in a spring coat and leaking shoes. She will not have to worry about her clothes wearing out or needing to be cleaned. School teachers are not without pride and it is sufficiently humiliating to be compelled to ask leniency of all the venders of life's necessities without also being compelled to go before the public in wornout clothing unsuited to the changes of the weather.

If mothers had to forego their bridge games to care for Junior for a while they would very soon send up a cry to high heaven for a settlement of the tax situation so that the schools could be reopened. We represent such a small handful of this community that our plight means nothing to the vast majority. If every mother in Chicago is made cognizant of it by being her own nursemaid for just one short month there will be more action on the tax problem than this city has ever seen.

DOWN AND OUT.

HIGHER TAXES AND WHY.

Oak Park, Ill., Dec. 11.—I notice that Mr. Hoover and Mr. Mellon are considering raising money for the government by increasing income taxes. Of course, we are all for our government, and I for one will be perfectly willing to do my part. However, just why do not Mr. Hoover and Mr. Mellon recommend saving the millions that are now appropriated for the so-called enforcement of prohibition? These millions are an absolute waste of the taxpayers' money, and would help considerably in reducing the government debt. It was bad enough to use our money for this purpose in good times; it is almost criminal now. RALPH M. HUNTER.

KNOWNOTHINGISM.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—It appears to me that "knownothingism," which had its birth in the middle of the last century and declined soon afterward, is having its recrudescence in the form of the remarks of C. A. L., which appeared in your column today. He would have Mayor Cermak to ascertain the number of aliens employed in the city of Chicago and would also have them removed to give their places to American citizens. How that would ameliorate the depression and unemployment is more than I can see. Furthermore, has he any idea whatsoever that for every alien discharged an equally competent and skilled citizen would be secured? Would not such a change tend to demoralize and disorganize any industry that would attempt such a silly plan? I doubt very much whether any sane and sensible executive would ever give serious consideration to the plan of C. A. L. If at any time good common sense was ever needed now surely is the time.

DAVID M. GOMEL.

WHY MILK IS CHEAPER IN MILWAUKEE.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—In the Voice of the People of Dec. 20 Mr. A. M. Preston voiced his opinion on the cost of milk delivery in Chicago.

Delivery conditions in Milwaukee and Chicago are entirely different. Delivery in apartment neighborhoods is slower than delivery in private home neighborhoods. Also there is far less sold per delivery in apartments than in homes. Especially is this true of apartment hotel trade, where the most exacting service is demanded. In Chicago there are very few people who will permit milk delivery after 12 noon; and the height of desire apparently is delivery at 8 a. m. In Milwaukee, delivery is continued far into the afternoon. Is it any wonder each route in Milwaukee carries more than twice as much as the average Chicago route? We Chicago route salesmen would be delighted to deliver the same amount, if not more, but the public will not permit late delivery. We are sorry the public must pay for their intolerance. People in the city have caused our rule, "no delivery before 8 a. m." Does this leave us sufficient time to solicit, collect and deliver as much as the salesmen in Milwaukee who deliver far into the afternoon?

We wonder how many people realize how much the average route salesman loses of his salary in dead beats and disputes. If they knew the truth their conception of the lucrative salary would receive a terrific blow. At the present time I doubt if the average route salesman in Chicago is receiving more than $45 per week counting his commission.

THE CHARITY BALL.

Chicago, Dec. 20.—The charity ball, about which THE TRIBUNE has taken such pains to instruct the unfortunate proletariat, appears to have been attended by many society ladies who attended expecting to be clothed by charity when they got there, but evidently were disappointed and had to have their photographs taken in many stages of nudity. We are wondering if THE TRIBUNE could not use its powerful columns to take up a contribution of clothes for them.

(MISS) HILDA L. MANCINE.

STREET CAR ECONOMICS.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—A recommendation made yesterday before Federal Judge Wilkerson for a reduction in the salaries of officials of the Chicago Surface Lines is certainly in order when we consider the service that has been rendered by these lines for some time.

This action brings to mind a complaint that I have been wanting to register for a long time and one that I am sure will be approved by thousands of other patrons. It concerns the filth and grime of the average street car.

Cut these officials' salaries down to where they belong, use the savings in employing a group of men to clean the cars thoroughly and regularly and I am confident that increased patronage will follow. ONE OF THE VICTIMS.

Writer Shows Sheridan as Fighter First

But Hergesheimer Reader Needs Good Map.

BY CLIFFORD RAYMOND.

[Author of "The American Historical Legion" series in The Chicago Sunday Tribune, etc.]

JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER

AN impression lingers after reading Mr. Hergesheimer's "Sheridan" that the writer was less interested in the soldier's character and more in the events in which he was an actor. That would be explained by the author's conclusion that Sheridan was all professional soldier. There was nothing else of him. The campaign is his life and each movement of troops is a detail of that life. Consequently the reader sits down to a biography which is an etching of the movement of troops. Those movements must have applied to Mr. Hergesheimer as if they were the lines of an artist's composition on a great canvas. As they are drawn the subject takes form. Lights and shadows, rhythm, purpose, design and life appear. The reader may take this art in one of two ways. He may lose himself go sensuously with the rhythm and know only that he is moving somewhere with the tramp of marching men. Or he may find a map somewhere and go to work.

Reader Needs Good Map.

What is really needed with Mr. Hergesheimer's book is the U. S. government atlas compiled by Capt. Calvin D. Cowles, 23d U. S. Infantry. He can try his battle of Chickamauga at that and get somewhere.

Mr. Hergesheimer does Chickamauga with fidelity to each line required, as he does other great maneuvers, but here's a field which has thirty mile sweep of troops. The blue and Tennessee brigades darkens mountain tops, ridges, gaps, coves and valleys in a movement which opened the Tennessee to take in a retreating army and contracted almost in a stranglehold to save the army from a pursuing enemy which hit it in the middle.

Although Mr. Hergesheimer appears to smile there in one small key which shows a bit of romanticism in him. It is really only an incidental statement, but nevertheless it is a key to the author's feeling for military history. He refers to Shiloh as a "doubtful victory."

The hasty phrase reveals either thoughtlessness or romanticism. Shiloh was a doubtful victory only if regarded as a bout in which the defeated champion had the better of several clashes or as a football game in which the defeated team made a game fight of it. Much contemporary opinion regarded it as a doubtful victory merely because the field seemed for a time to have been lost. Hurt pride closed the eyes. Shiloh was a complete victory of enduring consequences. The historical writer who can confuse the battles with the facts exhibits a bent for which the reader must make allowances elsewhere.

Great Moment for Sheridan.

Sheridan, as Mr. Hergesheimer does, was a minor actor in two-thirds of the mighty drama in which he played. If the startling, unordered charge up Missionary Ridge, under the unbelieving eyes of Grant himself, had failed, if it had come to a disaster, Sheridan might have remained a minor character. When Grant's big play brought him the supreme command of all the armies of the federal union it brought Sheridan his opportunity and the country a general it badly needed.

Sheridan told Meade he could beat Stuart with the sadly treated Union cavalry. Meade repeated that audacious, without confidence in it, to Grant. "Let him do it," said Grant. Sheridan, thereupon, did, killing the incomparable Jeb. He rode to the line of Richmond and for a day his troopers washed their shirts and socks with gun shot of the city's defenders reading news of their exploit in the Richmond papers which newsboys brought out to sell them.

Jubal Early paid back this exploit by doing another of the Confederate cavalry in the Shenandoah valley and so gave Sheridan his next great assignment. It was to close the Shenandoah forever to the gray miracles which Stonewall Jackson had begun. In the description of this campaign Mr. Hergesheimer almost succeeds in making maps unnecessary and this almost creates an awe before the face of narrative art because the Shenandoah is a tricky formation of mountain ranges and mountain gaps and valleys in which masters of military tactics work magic with maps or knowledge of terrain.

Closes South's Granary.

Here came Sheridan's ride, but that is popular poetry. The poetry of war was written by him in flanking movements in the dark of the night on the mountain slopes. Read Hergesheimer's description of the preparations for Fisher's Hill. Finally Early was out of the Shenandoah. The confederacy was out of it. In the greater kindness of war when it seems most inhuman this granary of the south was smoking. The smoke came from its barns and fields. Its crops and its stock and subsistence were destroyed. As a by pass, which had once led to Gettysburg, it was closed for duration. Sheridan had done in a few months what no other commander had been able to do in three years.

The American civil war is to human experience what the Nibelungenlied is to human imagination—its highest reach. It bites a writer hard when it bites and American readers may be glad that it has bitten Mr. Hergesheimer, as much of his recent work reveals.

Good morning!

Off to Reno we go this trip, and there meet Wheeler and Woolsey as a thriving firm of divorce attorneys.

Wattles and Swift are their names, and they conduct their business with foresight and astuteness. Their busses meet all trains and, with dispatch, speed passengers to the offices of Wattles & Swift, who for the sum of $100 agree to separate anything.

It so happens that BOTH Mr. and Mrs. Bruno, who, when the picture starts, are celebrating their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary, which celebration ends in the battle that lands husband and wife in Reno, consult them. Hot on the heels of Pop and Mom come the Brunos' two pretty daughters, bound to prevent the divorce if to do so is humanly possible.

Rival attorneys get in dirty work. One result of this is the necessity for Mr. Wheeler to pose as a blond divorcée—which he does to great effect—looking for all the world like Bebe Daniels when she went goldilocks.

The picture kids the divorce colony, lawyers, judges, juries, etc., from start to finish. Action is fast and comical. Lines are laugh provoking, and there are songs and dances that will please you. Zelma O'Neal as one of the boys' clients is awfully funny—a lot like Charlotte Greenwood in looks and manner of approach. You'll enjoy Joseph Cawthorn and Sam Hardy.

See you tomorrow!

Science Finds Better Ways for Fighting Tuberculosis Germs

With the aid of important improvements in two weapons against tuberculosis, medical science will continue its fight against tuberculosis during 1932. These advances have been made in the purification of tuberculin, a substance used as a diagnostic aid and the standardization of X-ray pictures.

Dr. Ethan Allen Gray, a director of the Chicago Tuberculosis Institute, told yesterday of these attainments in the past year. They have been made by scientists working under the direction of the research committee of the National Tuberculosis association.

"Although it is difficult for those outside the medical profession to understand and appreciate what is meant by 'purified tuberculin' and 'standardization of X-ray pictures,' these two developments during the last year are of considerable significance to members of the medical profession.

"For years tuberculin has been a valuable diagnostic aid, although it was at first thought a cure after its discovery by Robert Koch, a great German physician in 1882. It is used as a simple harmless skin test as a means of determining if a person has been infected with tubercule bacilli. In the past, there has been one flaw in the tuberculin test, and that is that the tuberculin contained ingredients other than the active principal, some of which might cause reactions when there really was no tubercular infection at all."

With the new improvements in X-ray equipment devised during the last year, a standard has been established, Dr. Gray said, by which the operator of the machine can be sure that a certain established density in the picture will be obtained.

John D. Rockefeller Has 130 Guests at His Party in Florida

Ormond, Fla., Dec. 28.—(AP)—John D. Rockefeller Sr. was host tonight to 130 friends at the annual Christmas party in his winter home, the Casements, here.

Singing of religious songs and Christmas carols marked the occasion.

There were presents for everybody, including the children who came with their parents or were special guests.

"Neighbor John" was a busy host. He chatted with all his friends and wished them the season's best.

Decorations in the quaint old mansion carried out the spirit of Christmas. Beautiful, long stemmed poinsettias, holly wreaths, and other holiday floral decorations were used.

The central room, domed with a stained glass skylight, a gift long ago of John D. Rockerfeller Jr., was the center of the celebration. The inside of the dome was a masterpiece of the decorator's art. Workmen labored a week to prepare it with its effect of looking into a star-lit sky with twinkling Christmas lights peeping through the stars.

From this dome, with its balcony, many of the musical numbers, particularly those of the quartet, were given. Chairs were set inside the dome room and along the sun porch to the west from which was afforded a view of the gardens and the Halifax river.

Children had one end of the long porch for their tables and refreshments.

The Casements lent itself admirably to the semi-religious Christmas celebration. It was designed by a retired clergyman and his wife in ecclesiastical style.

Jobless Seek Books to Increase Skill, Get Temporary Cash

TWO marked tendencies have developed among the American people as the result of two years of depression. They have flocked to the public libraries and they have taken up serious and practical reading, chiefly along economic and vocational lines.

This was the report made yesterday at the opening of the midwinter meetings of the American Library association council at the Drake hotel, and it was accompanied by general concern among the librarians as to necessity of cutting budgets and at the same time giving increased usefulness of service.

Circulation statistics for thirty-six cities show a 10 per cent gain in all but three cities during the last year. These three are Chicago, Birmingham, and Ohama, and is explained here by the curtailment of book purchases and the lessening of hours of service in the branch libraries. The people in these thirty-six cities read 111,788,262 books during the last year, as against 103,821,317 the previous year.

An illustration of the new usefulness of libraries is given by Linda A. Eastman of Cleveland, member of the board on adult and library education.

"Of more than 2,000 men and women registrants for new borrowers' cards in one month," she said, "over 25 per cent stated that they were unemployed. Those out of work who seek suggestions or information on vocations range all the way from the unskilled drifters to the highly trained specialists in various fields.

"Books on general office work, secretarial training, bookkeeping, and accounting are called for by patrons. Attempts to tide over the out of work period are shown in requests for recipes for making candy, polishes, soaps, and cosmetics from those who hope to produce and sell them. Others are taking up fur farming, the raising of poultry, canaries, rabbits, or frogs, or mushroom growing.

"In hard times the library business always booms," said Miss Louise Prouty, assistant librarian at Cleveland. "There are record crowds in the libraries and it is amazing the number and classes of people that are asking for books on economics. They are seeking for fundamental causes. People will be more sane in the future. There will be more budgeting, more careful spending."

School Lunch Fund Spreads to 167 Buildings

Teacher Hopes Cash Will Grow to Meet Needs.

Cash contributions to the Hungry School Children's fund will be received at the following Tribune offices: 1 South Dearborn street, 1101 East 63d street, and 4132 West Madison street.

After the holidays children from poor families will be provided with hot, nourishing lunches free through the generosity of readers of THE TRIBUNE in 167 schools instead of 122 schools which have been receiving donations from THE TRIBUNE Hungry School Children's fund.

Miss Frances L. Swain of the board of education, who is in charge of the distribution of the fund, announced the addition of the 45 schools yesterday. With the progress of winter, she said, the need has increased.

"It is difficult to cut any of the schools off our list," Miss Swain said. "We just hope that the fund grows so that these 167 schools may be cared for adequately. The teachers in each school feel their responsibility, making sure that they ask for no more than they actually need to care for their pupils.

"As an example of this spirit, one school voluntarily said they would take a decrease in the amount of the fund allotted to that school for lunches, so that a neighboring school which was not on our list could share in the fund."

Many clubs throughout the city and suburbs are giving bridge benefits and sending the proceeds to the Hungry School Children's fund. Donations from towns in other states, notably Michigan and Wisconsin, are coming in from readers of THE TRIBUNE there. Many children of well to do families or families in moderate circumstances are giving plays or otherwise earning money to give to the children who have no lunch to eat, and often no breakfast or dinner, either, unless they obtain a lunch free of cost in the schools.

Gifts may be mailed to the cashier of THE TRIBUNE, at The Tribune Tower. A nickel buys a child a hot, nourishing meal.

Anna L. Cronin, principal of the Felsenthal school, 4101 Calumet avenue, and the Fuller school, 537 East Forty-second street, wrote to THE TRIBUNE to express the schools' appreciation for the Hungry School Children's fund. This fund, she said, with contributions made by the Welfare association of the Harvard School for Boys, 4721 Ellis avenue, has enabled their hungry pupils to eat daily since Nov. 2.

THE STAGE

"RHAPSODY IN BLACK."

A musical entertainment by various song writers and composers, given at the Garrick theater, Dec. 27, 1931; with Ethel Waters as star, under the management and stage direction of Lew Leslie.

THE COMPANY.

Ethel Waters	Miss Valaida
Berry Brothers	Dusty Fletcher
Florence Hill	Blue McAllister
Avis Andrews	Geneva Washington
Eloise Uggams	Cecil Mack's choir
The Davis' Continental orchestra.

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

THIS "Rhapsody in Black," now in performance at the Garrick theater by a company of Negro players, singers, and musicians, is an unusual affair. It is altogether unlike any other entertainment of the same racial background that has ever been offered here.

It is neither a "Shuffle Along" nor a "Blackbirds"; neither a musical comedy nor a revue. Its musicianship is so highbrow, its interpretation of the intricacies of jazz composition is so ceremonial and devout, that it seems like a ritual prepared for the ecstatic worship of the new orchestral idols.

The show is, more than anything else, a cantata in praise of the Great God Jazz, who is frequently alleged to be a new art form—an exalted concert celebrating the mystery of harmonic cube roots and rhythmic mixed fractions. The practitioners of this rite, I should add, are highly gifted musicians and fine singers.

The premiere of "Rhapsody in Black" was greeted with the most fervent and rapturous applause of the playgoing season. A great throng of idolaters was in attendance, flushed with enthusiasm for the new art form, and the Garrick's walls echoed with the vibrations of their mighty hand clapping.

I was not aware, until I heard this tumult, that the Sunday nighters of Chicago were such adepts in the higher mathematics of frenzied orchestration and the complexities of choral ringing—matters in which my education has been neglected. These experts, who are taking heavy post-graduate courses in musical appreciation at the best night clubs, infallibly applauded with fury numbers that filled me with a novice's ennui.

For I must confess to my limitations: much of "Rhapsody in Black" bored me severely. It is musically too elaborate for my simple and untutored taste. The show, well conceived, handsomely staged, and cleverly performed, appears to be over my head. For example, when Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" was played—and brilliantly played—I did not arise and cheer for this classic of the jazz age. I merely muttered, "What an overrated composition!"

With this musical highbrowism, there is a certain tendency in "Rhapsody in Black" to bear down upon that phase of jazz called "blues." This does not make for gayety in the program—and the first purpose of a revue, I submit, is to be gay. Dolorous anthems are strongly favored, and even the admirable Ethel Waters, star character singer of the company and a naturally blithe personality, chants of the woes of washerwomen and taxi dancers and lovelorn wenches.

Miss Valaida, another attractive figure in the troupe, has her greatest moment in an agonized cantata based on the melancholy folk song, "St. James' Infirmary." Cecil Mack's choir, a group of notable voices, puts on its ascension robes at 10:30 and pours out that famous liturgical lament, "Eli, Eli"—in Yiddish, if you please.

Miss Waters and Miss Valaida in characteristic numbers; the choir in chants so complicated that the words are swallowed up in the rich flood of song, and Pike Davis' Continental orchestra, jazzing with sober and learned majesty upon the stage—this represents the routine of "Rhapsody in Black." The Berry brothers, Blue McAllister, and Dusty Fletcher give assistance now and then with bits of song and dance. McAllister's fancy stepping to a jazz treatment of Victor Herbert's "March of the Toys" is a refreshing incident, and Florence Hill—a yellow Ann Pennington—brings the gayety of the old line Negro shows into a dancing rhapsody with Dusty Fletcher.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Discovery of a true missing link, an animal with the "foundations of the human face," was described to the American Association for the Advancement of Science today by Prof. William Patten of Dartmouth college.

The link is a tiny, five inch long skeleton, found in rocks of the Baltic sea. It is between 500,000,000 and 1,000,000,000 years old and has the typical markings of a certain early prenatal development of a human being.

It is an ostracoderm, an extinct tenpin shaped fishlike creature, descendant of giant spiders, the sea scorpions, which Prof. Patten said "something like a thousand million years ago were the highest mammals in existence."

This Baltic fossil bridges the gap between man's evolutionary "family," as evolutionists say, the backboned animals, and about three-fourths of all the world's living creatures, which were considered beyond the pale of kinship. This vast outside host includes the insects. It is the arachnid family, the jointed foot animals, creatures which carry their skeletons outside like armor plate instead of inside built around a backbone.

Now, he thinks, he has found the missing link to convince them. "For more than forty years," he said, "the author has been trying to find in one part of the world or another, in primitive animals living or extinct, some easily understood structure which would carry conviction to his less hopeful colleagues.

"That has been done, I think, in the recent discovery of some ostracoderms from the island of Oesel in the Baltic seas. They show very clearly some of the earliest known geologic stages in the development of the face, with jaws and mouth as predicted and at the same time resembling a condition long known to exist in early embryonic stages of human beings.

From Sea Scorpion to Man.

"These very ancient fossils show us that the fundamental pattern of bodily organization from sea scorpions to man has not changed in any essential respects for something like a thousand million years, and that such evolutionary factors as heredity, environment and natural selection serve merely to sustain, liberate or control the inherent creative potentialities of the initial patterns."

The ostracoderms had six pairs of gills, or arches, in the mouth. Prenatal humans also have gills and other similarities to animals. These animal "vestiges" change rapidly in the developing human into various normal organs.

It appears, Prof. Patten explained, that the two upper pairs of ostracoderm gills developed into some of the upperhead bones. The third, fourth, and fifth pairs became the upper and the lower jaws. The sixth pair turned into a chin.

"These developmental readjustments," he said, "laid the foundation for the human face."

Better Fortunes; More Boys.

The proportion of boys born to a family depends on the care the mother receives before birth, and hence depends on the family's wealth, a study by Sanford Winston of North Carolina State college showed. Among 5,466 American families above the average in wealth, education, and social standing, there were 113 boys born to every 100 girls. Among the American population as a whole the ratio is only 105 boys to 100 girls.

The reason is that more boy babies die before birth than girl babies, Winston explained. Well to do mothers, receiving better prenatal care, have fewer still births and so more of their boy babies live to be born. Census figures on still births show that there are 123 such deaths of boy babies to every 100 girls.

A way to detect heart disease by reading the electrical code message the heart sends out was described by Dr. Louis F. Bishop of Sea View hospital, New York. He warned that severe pains in the abdomen do not always mean stomach trouble, but may be a sign of heart disease that can be detected only by listening for this sort of nature's "S O S."

Tropical Terror Is Abated.

The cure for one form of a jungle disease 4,000 years old was announced tonight by Dr. Richard P. Strong of the Harvard medical school's department of tropical medicine. The worms, called by scientists the "family filariidae," attack men, animals, birds, fish and snakes. They are referred to in the Bible, said Dr. Strong, as the "plague of fiery serpents" that attacked the Israelites on the shores of the Red sea. The worms look like long cotton threads and live in warm climates from Charleston to Argentina, from Italy to Australia. In humans they cause the terrible swellings of limbs and other parts of the body called elephantiasis, some times blindness, tumors and skin eruptions. The tumors can be removed by a simple, safe operation that costs only $2 per patient.

American educators disagree widely on the ideals and ideas of right and wrong that should be taught to children, J. B. Mailer, teachers' college, Columbia university, New York, reported to the association. He presented 70 problems of moral conflict to 517 representative educators and asked them to choose one of several possible answers.

Eighty-eight per cent of the educators said loyalty to mankind should come before loyalty to country. Training children for leadership instead of to follow others was favored by 78 per cent. The teachers differed half and half on whether self sacrifice or ambition should be stressed in child training. They were divided almost as evenly on whether a child should specialize in one field or be trained in many versatile interests.

The Bride's Boat

By Coralie Stanton and Heath Hosken

SYNOPSIS.

Kit Lenoure, receptionist in a London family hotel, accepts the offer of a post in the Grand Africa hotel, Soydoret, Kenya. Theo Sable had gone there two years before, when Kit had broken her engagement to him. But Kit still wanted him more than anything in the world. She sails on the "Bride's Boat." Jess North, her cabin mate, is going out to be married. Lal Crowhurst, the biggest landowner about Soydoret and a most attractive bachelor, is on the boat. He is attentive to Kit. Soydoret proves to be a paradise with many serpents and terrible powers of demoralization to weak natures. Jess is married to Noel Graham, who manages Crowhurst's coffee plantations. Kit adapts herself to her new surroundings. Theo Sable, who has taken up big game hunting, arrives in Soydoret. Kit and Theo are overjoyed to have found each other again. But there are inexplainable changes in Theo that Kit can't understand. Ariel Grieve, the widow, who, scandal has it, owes Lal Crowhurst, also has her tentacles secretly around Theo. A dance and entertainment, to wind up the season, is given at the hotel. Next morning Ariel Grieve is found dead from an overdose of a sleeping drug. She left a letter obviously written to a man she was in love with and who had let her down. Every one suspects Crowhurst. Theo is accused of cheating in a card game. He declares his innocence, but Kit alone believes him. He leaves next day on a hunting trip. Jess Graham calls on Crowhurst.

INSTALLMENT XXXVIII.

A CAT ABOUT TO SCRATCH.

Crowhurst took in several things about Jess's appearance as he approached her besides her beauty; the importance compressed into her small, prim mouth particularly, and a deep glow in her golden eyes. He was immediately on his guard.

"Mr. Crowhurst," Jess began, speaking much more quickly than usual, "I heard you were going away soon and so I came to tell you something. I have been dreadfully worried about it. I really made myself quite ill; so I knew it was my duty to come and see you."

"I must say I have never seen you looking better, Mrs. Graham. But if you are worried about something, just say what it is and I'm sure we can soon put it right."

"I don't know. You will think I have done a very wicked thing, Mr. Crowhurst. And the worst of it is that it is against you, who have been so kind and good to us."

"Against me!" His voice sharpened. His thoughts flew to only one person. His eyes narrowed, and grew cold and watchful.

"Yes. It's about poor Mrs. Grieve."

Jess had sat down, at his invitation, in a large velvet cushioned armchair of dark carved wood, with his arms emblazoned in rich colors on the back. She curled herself up in pretense of fear.

"Mrs. Grieve!" His voice was blank. It was the last thing he had expected.

"Yes. I don't suppose you know. I can't think you know. I must say things that will make you angry. People said Mrs. Grieve took the veronal on purpose because she was unhappy. The letter she left behind——"

"Stop, Mrs. Graham!" interrupted Crowhurst harshly. "You can't have anything new to say!"

Jess's eyes brightened, but the lids dropped instantly as she said in a very small voice:

"That's it, Mr. Crowhurst. I think I have something new to say. I felt you couldn't know more than anybody else. All these unkind people here were saying that it was to you the letter was written——"

"What is there new in that, Mrs. Graham? It is nobody's business."

"But it was not written to you, Mr. Crowhurst!"

"What do you mean?"

"It was written to some one else—another man—Mr. Theo Sable."

"Mrs. Graham, are you mad? How could such a thing be possible? Mrs. Grieve never knew Mr. Sable. How could she?"

"She did know him. She was in love with him."

Crowhurst looked at her hard. He had placed her chair so that her face was in the light and he stood in the shadow. Here was something tortuous, something that he knew well enough he had to expect from Jess Graham, of the ever clutching hand.

"You are indeed telling me something that I didn't know," he said with a simplicity that was at once true and false.

Then she told him, without more ado, all that she had overheard on the night of the dance when she had been up in Kit Lenoure's bedroom and Theo Sable and Ariel Grieve had been just underneath.

Though he believed her, his brain reeled.

"You must be making a mistake, Mrs. Graham!"

"I am not, Mr. Crowhurst. One couldn't make a mistake. It was so plain. Mrs. Grieve was asking him to go away with her. She told him that she had never loved any one else but him. If you had heard her voice . . . Then Mr. Sable told her that he was going to marry Kit and it—well, it simply did for her. She told him he couldn't marry her and he said he would. He told her he must be straight with her. Then she said she would die, when she understood that he meant it. I can hear her voice now—you know what a wonderful voice it was—she said he had been coming to Snow View every night and telling her that he loved her, and now he was throwing her over. She said she would die of sorrow. You could hear it in her voice—she was dying then."

Crowhurst walked to the window and back.

"How did it end?" he asked.

"Mrs. Grieve was too wonderful—she seemed to pull herself together all in a minute, and she said it was all right. She said Kit was a charming girl. She particularly asked if you knew about it, and he said you did. Then she bade him goodnight and she went away."

"Why didn't you say anything—after her death?"

"I didn't like to. You must understand—I had been listening. I had no business to, only I couldn't help myself."

"And why do you tell me now?"

"Because I know I was wrong. They all think it was your fault and it wasn't."

"They said nothing to tell you how and when they had met?"

"Nothing—nothing at all. Only, it was obvious—they were lovers. And she—she loved him still. And he told her straight out that he loved Kit, and she—well, she didn't want to live any more. She must have been crazy about him," added Jess, planting a dart neatly in what she thought must still be a vulnerable spot.

A shuttle of blinding light was darting backwards and forwards in Crowhurst's brain and sending messages down to his heart. He had known, of course, that Ariel had not written that letter to him. But he had not the slightest idea to whom she had written it. He had candidly believed that she had gone temporarily out of her senses, probably through the misery of not being able to sleep.

But his reason was too acute for him to think for more than a second of time that there was any cause for rejoicing in this pitiful revelation. It could mean nothing to him. But everything to that one person he thought of. There was only one issue—Kit Lenoure must never know.

And, in cold distaste, he realised perfectly that this was exactly what Jess Graham was getting at.

"I hate to think that it is my fault, Mr. Crowhurst. People are thinking these terrible things about you——"

"Don't worry about that!" he said firmly. "I can't help thinking that you must have made a mistake. You know, things one hears like that without knowing the context——"

"I suppose you could find out, Mr. Crowhurst. There must be ways. Somebody must know when and where they knew each other. It seems that Theo Sable disappeared for quite a time during the last two years."

"What did you think of doing about it?" he asked her. "I mean—what was your idea of solving the matter?"

"I thought I ought to go and tell Mr. Dunbar. It seems to me to be my plain duty, although of course it will be dreadful for me."

He had nailed her down, and the rest, he knew, was easy enough.

"It is very nice of you to be so concerned about me, Mrs. Graham. But—let us be quite frank about this. I don't want anything said about it at all. Miss Lenoure is engaged to Sable. He is already under a cloud. We have had quite enough unpleasantness in Soydoret for the time being. Let things be, please!"

First Plea for Assistance.

"I hate to bother you but I do need a suit and an overcoat, size 40 to 42. Do you think you could locate these for me? I am the sole support of my mother who is sickly and now I am out of work. I have never had to ask for charity before but I just cannot get a job. I should appreciate some shirts, size 16, and a pair of shoes, size 10, also. If you can get some clothing for my mother, size 50 or 52, she will be glad to have it.

"J. L."

Here's another man who has never had to ask for assistance before. Unemployment is making the situation difficult for him now, especially since he has the support of his invalid mother to think of. Can you help him by giving any clothing in the sizes mentioned above?

THREE MEALS A DAY

From the Tribune Cook Book

BY MARY MEADE.

Food Talk

I imagine there will be lots of watch parties this year. Everybody is so dissatisfied with this year that there won't be many people who won't want to stay up to see the next one start. And along toward one o'clock they'll all want something to eat. Even the largest dinner isn't enough to keep people from getting hungry when they rush out into the cold to fire guns and things.

There ought to be something hot. To be as easy as possible for the hostess, the things for this late supper can all be prepared beforehand but this one hot dish, and that can very well be made in the presence of the guests, if it is something like a Welsh rarebit.

The plates, silver, and napkins can be put out on the buffet, and whatever there is in the way of olives, pickles, sandwiches, cheese, and salad can be produced from the ice box. All the ingredients of the hot dish can be assembled in the kitchen, awaiting a last minute combination.

If you have a chafing dish, a Welsh rarebit is, as I have suggested, practically perfect. The Welsh, as you may know, make their rarebits with beer in place of the milk that most of our recipes call for. If that sounds good to you, you may substitute an equal quantity of any good near beer for the milk in your particular recipe.

Oyster stew, shrimp Louisiane [shrimp cooked delicately with tomatoes, green pepper, onion and a great deal of seasoning], chili, and chop suey, are all things that will taste like more early on the first day of 1932.

Creamed eggs and mushrooms with bacon curl garnishings would fill the bill, too. Cut the hard boiled eggs into little pieces and heat in cream sauce. Flatten strips of bacon, roll them and skewer with toothpicks. French fry them, and when they are crisp and brown remove, drain, and take out the toothpicks. Put the eggs into a deep dish and arrange the bacon curls on top.

And whatever you have—be sure to include quarts and quarts of steaming, aromatic coffee!

Word "Charm" Hard Worked, but Try to Find a Better One

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Some people say privately and in print that they hate the word "charm." They hate its application to people. Perhaps that's because we hear too much about "charming" chairs, "charming" curtains, "charming" lamps, "charming" saucepans. Anyway, the word is made to do such heavy duty in a given period of time that its application to women may, to some folk, lose some of its "charming" import.

Yet, how can you otherwise describe the gift you've either got or you haven't? How can you describe the beauty appeal of some of our fair sisters over other good looking women unless you do drag the overabused word in by the hair of its head?

I say there's a place for it in the analysis of beauty. The new bathroom curtains may not need it. But women do.

If you ask among the intelligentsia with which you happen to be surrounded, or the near-intelligentsia, you'll get the meaning of charm boiled down to one word. Allure! Which doesn't help much, either, in putting your finger on it. That doesn't tell you where to go buy it or how to go about getting it.

Keep on asking and you'll finally get an idea that charm is more a thing of eyes and voice than of any of the other physical properties. Both of these features, to have charm, you'll further learn, must have the quality of softness about them. Soft eyes, soft voice, and as much of that same dulcet appeal as you can muster into dress and manner.

Anyway, a lady may be one of those crystal-brilliant productions, yet never earn an encomium for her charm. She may be stunning. She may be the last word in sophistication. She may be a gorgeous looking creature. There's no fear, however, that she'll be mistaken for a graduate of the charm school.

One way of getting that soft light to eye and voice is to go deliberately about cultivating it. This automatically eliminates thinking the thoughts that put steel and flint in the eye and substituting a gentler attitude, a kindlier philosophy.

Arts Club Now Follows Plan of Mrs. Carpenter

WHAT more delicate tribute could the Arts club, of which she was the presiding genius, pay to the memory of the late Mrs. John Alden Carpenter than to go ahead with the arrangements for "shows" that she had made early in the season when the schedule for exhibitions for this winter was made by her and her efficient and devoted co-worker in all matters pertaining to the club, Miss Alice Roullier?

To cancel the exhibitions would have been entirely foreign to Mrs. Carpenter's wishes and so the club is carrying on and on Jan. 4 there will be a tea from 4 to 6 o'clock to open exhibitions of paintings by Picasso and Charles Dufresne. Both "shows" have been in New York recently, where they created quite a sensation among the devotees of the French modernists.

Debutantes Are Kept Busy by Holiday Season Parties.

The holiday program for the debutantes and their masculine contemporaries goes on apace, with a great loss of sleep for all concerned. Last night at about 9 o'clock more than 50 members of the younger set assembled at the Casino for the debut dinner-dance that Mr. and Mrs. John Adams Chapman and Harold F. McCormick gave for Miss Margaret Chapman, and shortly after midnight the same crowd went to dance and have supper at Mrs. A. Harris Whiting's ball for Miss Louise Clark at the Blackstone.

The Casino was abloom with Christmas decorations for Miss Chapman's debut. Mr. and Mrs. Fowler McCormick assisted in the receiving line with the debutante and her parents and Harold McCormick. Mrs. Fowler McCormick's son, Alexander Stillman, who is here from Harvard for the holidays, attended the party with his mother and stepfather. Miss Chapman wore a white satin gown and her mother was in pink satin.

Fir trees, wreaths of holly, and poinsettias were used to lend a holiday atmosphere to Miss Clarke's party at the Blackstone. Two large urns of Talisman roses flanked a smilax hedge at the ballroom entrance where Mrs. Whiting and Miss Clarke received the guests. The debutante, who was presented at a tea in November, wore a yellow crêpe dress, and Mrs. Whiting was in white velvet.

Two of the winter's debutantes are making their formal bows tonight, Miss Edith Behr at a dinner dance and Miss Marjorie Horton at a ball. Miss Behr and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Leslie Behr, will receive their 225 guests at the Casino and later Miss Behr and many of the guests will go to the Blackstone, where Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rinaker are presenting Mrs. Rinaker's daughter, Miss Horton. The Rinaker ball is limited to young people.

Yale and Williams Alumni Luncheons Set for Today.

Today the undergraduates of two of the leading eastern universities, Yale and Williams, and their fathers will be entertained at luncheon by the Chicago alumni. The Yale club will give its luncheon at 12:15 o'clock at the Bal Tabarin and the speakers will be John R. Winterbotham, president; John S. Wilbur of Cleveland, Yale's football captain for next season, and Elliott Dunlap Smith, who, although he is a Harvard graduate, is now an instructor at Yale. He will talk on Yale's new quadrangle system. Mr. Smith is a former Chicagoan and is a brother of Lawrence D. Smith of Lake Forest and of Perry D. Smith of Winnetka.

The Williams Alumni association will have its luncheon at 12:30 o'clock at the University club and the speakers will be Marcus D. Richards, president; Charles R. Lindsay III., '26; William C. Fowle, '32, and the Hon. Henry W. Austin, '88.

The annual holiday father and son luncheon of the alumni, patrons, and undergraduates of Lake Forest academy will be held today at the Union League club. Rush C. Butler, Edward Warren Everett, Ernest Palmer, and Headmaster John Wayne Richards will speak.

The college boys are not the only ones who are being entertained by the alumni of their respective colleges, for the girls also are coming in for their share of attention. This afternoon from 4 to 5 o'clock the Bryn Mawr College Club of Chicago will give a tea at the residence of Mrs. Edwin Peter Dewes, 2314 Lincoln Park West, for the Chicago undergraduates, including the Misses Helen Bell, Janet Blume, Cecilia Candee, Eleanor Cheney, Lucy Fairbank, Dorothy Gerhard, Helen Gill, Elinor Rose Hatfield, Virginia Hobart, Harriette Hunter, Janet Marshall, Harriet Moore, Gretchen Mueller, Evelyn Patterson, Kathren Snedicor and Grace Dewes. Miss Myra Little, who made her debut this winter, is planning to return to Bryn Mawr for her senior year next winter, and Miss Eleanor Chapman, who is taking her junior year abroad, also will return to Bryn Mawr for her senior year next year.

The Chicago Wells club will entertain present and prospective students of Wells college at tea this afternoon at the College club. Miss Honor Merrell, president, will receive, assisted by Miss Alice Barler and Mrs. James Carey.

Luncheons and Other Events on the List for Today.

Miss Alice May Dickinson, Miss Jane Valentine, Miss Eleanor Jerrems, Miss Dorothy Dewes, Miss Anne Byron Smith, and Miss Margaret Wells will be given a luncheon today at the Woman's Athletic club by Mrs. John Edward Wells.

An interesting affair at noon today will be the 12 o'clock breakfast at the Casino given by the Drama league for Channing Pollock. Mrs. William E. Wright is in charge of arrangements.

Another interesting luncheon on today's calendar is the one at 12:30 o'clock in Zeisler hall of the Woman's club, which the Woman's National Republican Club of Chicago will give. Rufus C. Dawes, president of the Century of Progress, will speak, after which there will be a tour of the World's Fair exposition buildings.

The Chicago Stadium probably will be the mecca of most tennis enthusiasts tonight when four of the world's greatest amateurs, Vines, Lott, Shields, and Van Ryn, will play both singles and doubles matches for the benefit of the J. E. R. F.

Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, chairman of the women's committee, asks us to state that there are a few boxes for six and plenty of good seats left. Mr. and Mrs. Chase, Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan Spalding, Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. King, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hibbard, Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Thorne, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Dennehy are among the boxholders giving dinners before the matches.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Miller will open their residence at 1500 Lake Shore drive this evening for a Christmas party for the members of the Green Room.

North Shore Schools Set Dance Tonight at Club.

Jack Horton, whose father owns the HF Bar ranch at Buffalo, Wyo., is here from Princeton for the debut ball of Miss Barbara Graf tomorrow night. The popular Mr. Horton is visiting his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Gorrell.

Mr. and Mrs. William Spencer and their son, Edson White Spencer, are spending the holidays at the Seignory club at Lucerne-in-Quebec.

Miss Carey chose as her assistants a number of the debutantes of this season and last.

Official Contract

By Charles True Adams

(International bridge authority; author of "Official Contract at Sight.")

Enthusiasm often is the basis of success. To play a really good game of contract a certain bubbling optimism is necessary, provided it be coupled with judgment and an ability to handle the difficult situations into which such temperament often leads a partnership. Yesterday's play-a-problem could and, from a conservative point of view, should have been bid six clubs. The little slam was sure. As the hand was originally played, however, it was bid seven and the seven were made. This was the hand:

NORTH (Dealer)
♠—H,6,4
♥—A,5

WEST
♥—K,Q,J,10

EAST
♠—9,7,5,3

SOUTH
♣—A,Q,J,J,10,6,5,4,3

North dealt and bid a diamond. East passed. South made a jump shift game demand bid of three clubs. West bid three hearts and North bid four hearts. East passed. South now knew that North held the ♥ A or none from the overbid of the opponents' suit. He also knew that North held more than a minimum one bid. North's overbid of the opponents' suit would have been a game demand bid had not South already made such a demand by his jump shift. North, therefore, could be presumed to hold less than required for a game demand bid, but could also be counted on to hold more than the minimum one bid. If he had only held a minimum one bid he would not have overbid in the opponents' suit, which implied this extra strength.

So far South's reasoning was sound. The next step, however, was born of enthusiasm. He knew he had no losing hearts and he also supposed enough strength in North's hand to take care of his two losing spades, since he could stop a lead in that suit with his ace. He did not know, however, that North held the ♦ A. North might have held the K and Q. A six club bid would seem absolutely safe. South, however, wanted North to have the ♦ A and therefore decided that he did have it. So South bid seven clubs.

West opened the ♥ K, North played the A, East the 4, and South the 6. South then led the ♣ K, followed by the ♣ 2, and took it with the 10 in his own hand, clearing the suit. South then led the ♠ 3 to dummy's K and then led back dummy's ♠ 6 to his ♠ A. At this point it is very apparent that South is going to be down one trick unless he can squeeze out an extra. It is also apparent that in order to make a successful squeeze play he must find West with all the diamonds higher than the 9, with the exception of the A. Enthusiasm and optimism are still at work. In the bidding South decided that North had the ♦ A because he wanted North to have it. He now decided that West had the ♦ K-Q-J-10 because he wanted West to have them and because it was the only way in which he could make his bid. South then proceeded to lead out the ♣ A-Q-J-6.

The following cards were then left in the four hands: West held the ♠ Q, the ♥ Q, and the ♦ K-Q. Dummy held the ♥ 5, the ♦ A-9-8. East held the ♠ 9 and ♥ 9-8 and ♦ 4. South held the ♠ 10, ♦ 2, and ♣ 6-4.

South now led the ♣ 5, West discarded the ♥ Q, dummy the ♦ 8, and East the ♠ 9. Next South led the ♣ 4 and West had to choose between the spades and the diamonds. He discarded the ♠ Q, dummy threw the ♥ 5 (since East still held the 9), and East the ♦ 4. South now led the good ♠ 10 for the twelfth trick and took the thirteenth in his dummy with the ♦ A.

Coral Red Silk Is Popular in Paris

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The midseason fashion shows now occurring in Paris reveal the intention of the French style makers to establish a red mode. All the reds that are warmed by yellow or orange are being used galore by the great houses. Red coral—a Vionnet color—is particularly smart, and is becoming to many different complexions. It is being heralded as one of the smart shades for spring.

Just as important as red are the new silks that look like woolens. There is a silk jersey that looks like wool jersey but is thin and cool. There is a silk serge, a silk diagonal, silk cashmere and a host of others, not to forget a new silk tweed.

The Augustabernard dress shown in our sketch today is made of the new silk cashmere and is coral red in color, so it is one of the smartest dresses to wear around town for the rest of the season.

The draped blouse of this frock, which has two self material jabots willfully placed askew on the V-neckline, being placed on the right side instead of in the center, is much smarter because of this. The left side of the blouse becomes a long bias sash that is draped around the waistline. The short puff sleeves are also chic, and so is the skirt, which is straight almost to the knees and then flares in a circular movement so it is comfortable to walk in.

A Happy New Year Cocktail

Wise Parents Plan Household Their Children Can Enjoy

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

She had just left a famous auction room when I met her. Of course, she had a tale—don't you always, when you've been to an auction sale?

"It was a beautiful 18th century English drop leaf table—an antique in perfect condition, and exactly what we need. It went for $80—and just about broke my heart. John and I had made up our minds that we simply wouldn't get a table that had to be cherished as that one would until the children were older. That lovely thing would have made me a despicable mother!" she said with a rueful laugh.

I know two or three mothers, and one man who loves gardens, who won't impose furnishings on their children that are too precious to use—that would make the parents nag and scold. That is one way to make your home fit your children, instead of making your children fit into your home.

Of course, that doesn't in the least mean you can't have lovely things. Nor does it mean that, if you have a large house with many rooms, you can't have some space reserved for the children's roughest and most rambunctious use. With lots of space you can have workshops and washbowls and playrooms and all the other things described in the books written on the ideal way to run a house and a family.

But most of us haven't all that luxury, for space is luxury these days. With most of us, parents and our children live "all in together, sheep in the medder," as the song goes. So, if we want a measure of serenity for ourselves and freedom for the children we need to plan our home furnishings accordingly.

That planning has to concern itself with two things. First, the suitability of upholstery materials and hangings and the practical finish and construction of the furniture. All that comes under one head.

The second thing is the need of bringing sizes down to the children's needs.

Doris Tells Young Couple Not to Make First Love Too Vital

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"I am almost 17 and I love a boy 18. Ever since he was 7, his sister has had him in charge. She's been both pal and mother. She was strict and trained him well, but for some unknown reason she forbids him to see me. And she has influenced his father the same way about us.

"I've been going with him since my fifteenth birthday. His sister and father claim he is too young to be going with girls. He is a good, decent fellow with the same old fashioned ideas I have about late hours, drinking and smoking. Do you think the sister and father are fair? We intend to keep on going together even though they do object. What do you say? HELEN S."

You are 17, "Helen"; the boy, 18. Let's grant that you two do feel most awfully grownup and mature, that you know what you want and that you think you just know everything about life and people and everything else. I'm not accusing only you two of knowing it all at 17 and 18. We all did, at that age.

"Somehow, the gift of real wisdom seems to be withheld until we've been out in the world and have learned a few of the cold facts of reality. That's why so many of the older ones are heard to say: "Wouldn't I have been the brainless one to have married at 17 or 18?" Or, "Wasn't I the lucky one not to have married that first terrific love of mine?"

Not that all first loves are doomed because of their youth, but as the old bromide sayeth: "Circumstances alter cases."

You see, you're a defiant young pair, as evidenced by your intention to see each other, anyway. That, of course, irks the sister and father. They, out of their own experience, know there is a serious financial side to getting married. They want to save the boy from precipitating himself into it unnecessarily young. They want him to get himself decently established before he takes on the responsibilities of marriage.

GET PROSECUTOR OUT OF POLITICS, PLEA OF LEWIS

Senator Speaks Before State Convention.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Nonpartisan election of state's attorneys was urged by Senator James Hamilton Lewis yesterday as a step toward the regenseration of respect for law. Addressing the Illinois State's Attorneys' association at its 35th annual convention at the Palmer house, the senator declared that administration of justice without partiality is the greatest safeguard against any encroachment of communism and anarchy, and the great need is to take the prosecutor's office out of partisan and factional politics.

SENATOR LEWIS.

Reviewing the course of crime since the advent of prohibition and Volsteadism, Senator Lewis spoke of tax dodging by "large interests" without punishment, and dwelt with irony upon the conviction of Al Capone for income tax evasion instead of crimes in connection with gangland and racketeering.

Cites Evasions of Tax.

"Large interests," he said, "have been allowed to swindle the government on taxes for ten years and little effort has been made to bring them to account. And when brought to book, they have been allowed to get off by paying a penalty. I challenge you to find any large financial leader who has evaded and has been indicted. Yet is the offense of such a one any less than that of Capone, or Druggan, or Oliver?

"Your courts are chock full of offenses growing out of prohibition, booze bandits, mail robbers, income tax thieves. They found a way to evade justice, and not until the government found itself with little money in the treasury was successful action taken.

"And now the government presents the regrettable spectacle of being willing to take a percentage of a criminal's earnings as a reward for letting him continue as a criminal. Do you think that is presenting a moral spectacle to the world?

Duty to Enforce Justice.

"The office of state's attorney is a judicial one, and its duties are the enforcement of what is justice. If there were recognition of that and those who cheat on taxes, instead of being prosecuted for evasion of taxes, were proceeded against for conspiracy in the crime of swindling the government, there would be less tax thieving and the treasures of local and national government would not be operating with a deficit.

"If that group were made to realise that indictments would result from their evasion of the duties of citizen taxpayers, if they knew that the state's attorney is empowered to watch their behavior, you'd not have the petty lawlessness which is being constantly multiplied. These are the kind who should have been taken before the grand jury.

Example for Criminals.

"And seeing them escape when brought to account, by the payment of a penalty, do you not think the lesser criminals believe they are justified in what they do? Do you not think these examples have influenced these other criminals.

"One remedy is to take the state's attorney out of politics. He should not be elected on a political ticket as Republican or Democrat. This has no foundation in decency. A prosecutor should be so elected that he can never be charged with being subservient to a party organization—he must be free from partisan and factional politics."

New officers were elected as follows: Wirt Herrick, Clinton, president; E. J. Coyle, Carrollton, secretary; H. E. Fullenwider, Springfield; Clarence T. Smith, Louisville, and Henry E. Pratt, Peoria, vice presidents.

At the annual dinner last night Rodney H. Brandon, state director of public welfare, spoke upon the parole and probation system. State's attorneys from more than eighty counties were present. State's Attorney John A. Swanson dwelt on the importance of the supreme court decision that the state has the right to demand a trial by jury. "It was a Christmas present to the state's attorneys," he said.

DRY IS PRAISED FOR REFUSING TO RAID WITHOUT WARRANT

To Prohibition Agent James Kominakis a man's house is his castle. Mr. Kominakis will not enter another man's home unless he has been vested with the proper authority, a legally drawn search warrant. This was revealed yesterday before Commissioner Edwin K. Walker in the case against Alfred J. Haak, 8142 Harper avenue, charged with the possession of liquor.

Before Kominakis took the stand, Agent A. L. Thomas testified that on Dec. 21 he entered the home of Haak and found a still, several gallons of alcohol, bottles of wine and home brew.

Kominakis testified that instructions were given to Agent H. E. Anderson, Thomas and himself to go out and raid a bungalow "that smelled of home brew in the 8100 block on Harper avenue." The agents sniffed around the neighborhood but failed to get on the right scent, according to Kominakis.

Just as they were about to give up, Kominakis testified, they saw Haak's bungalow. "That must be the place," said Thomas. There was no response to the bell or continued knocking. Thomas announced that he would break in, according to Kominakis.

"We had no warrant and I protested that it was against the law," Kominakis told the commissioner. "I refused to enter the place." Commissioner Walker commended Kominakis for his conduct. Haak was freed.

BLIZZARD BOOSTS HOPES OF 'WETS' IN FINNISH VOTE

Storm May Decide Dry Law Referendum.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Dec. 28.—(AP)—A blizzard that swept across Finland today threatened to be the deciding factor in the prohibition referendum which will take place tomorrow and Wednesday.

Prohibitionists have counted on farmers and workers to continue the 13 year old dry regime. A falling barometer and the blizzard caused depression at prohibition headquarters, for leaders explained that, with country roads impassable, many of their supporters would be prevented from voting.

Naturally, there was jubilance at the anti-prohibition headquarters.

Wets Are Jubilant.

"The chief stronghold of the drys is middle and northern Finland," the official in charge explained. "Here in the south and along the coast we know what evils and corruption prohibition has brought forth."

The voters will decide whether prohibition shall be continued, repealed outright, or modified to permit medium strength wines and beer. But their decision is expected to be effective only if it is overwhelmingly expressed. Leaders on both sides pointed out that the referendum is consultative, not mandatory.

Finland's capital acted on the eve of the referendum as if prohibition already were a thing of the past. In every restaurant, café, or hotel anybody could get any form of alcohol he wanted. The town was wide open.

Stage Last Day Drives.

Both sides put on a whirlwind last day campaign to reach voters in every part of the country. At prohibition headquarters it was said the thirteen dry years had been a success. The prohibitionists contended the remedy for corruption in handling the dry law consists in more rigid enforcement instead of abolition.

The opponents of prohibition resent the term "wets," as they contend they favor sobriety quite as much as the prohibitionists. In addition to publishing a special paper and having the support of all dailies except the Socialist and agrarian organs, they have flooded the country with posters.

Prohibition was established in Finland in 1915, when the country became an independent republic. Severe graded penalties, consisting of fines according to the income of the offenders and jail sentences, were provided. The penalties were increased in 1922, and in 1928 the diet passed several amendments making enforcement more rigorous.

Go to Send Death Message; Get One of Another Death

Canton, Ill., Dec. 28.—(AP)—When members of the Josiah S. Hagerman family went to the telegraph office to send a message of Mr. Hageman's death to his widow's brother, William Duncan, in Bryant, S. D., they were handed a telegram of his death at almost the same hour. Hageman was an employe of the International Harvester company for 44 years.

PASTOR SLAYER TRIES TO BLAME HIDDEN ASSASSIN

Palatka, Fla., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—The theory that John J. Malone, who was found mortally wounded near a liquor still at Kenwood on Christmas eve, was shot by a vengeful enemy was advanced today by the Rev. E. H. McGaha, who is held for the slaying, in testifying before the coroner's jury.

Stating that he had reason to believe that the still had been stolen and moved to Kenwood from another locality, McGaha said five shots were heard at the time Malone was killed, part of which had not been accounted for. He also called attention to two warning notes found in Malone's pocket after his death.

These notes, which were crudely written and variously interpreted, were read by Coroner P. B. Huff as follows:

"You thought you were smart because you got it out. Be careful I am turning everything up. Think maybe you better see me. I'm riding beauty to Interlachen [fifteen miles distant]."

The other note read:

"You thought you were smart. Be careful." Both notes, in the same handwriting and written with pencil, were signed "J. E."

Prior to setting up the new theory, McGaha had testified that he had located the still and had lain in wait from the previous midnight until 11 o'clock, at which time two men—Malone and an unknown Negro—had appeared on the scene. Accompanying McGaha were Deputy Sheriffs Wayne Watkins, G. W. Prater, and Lee Jernigan.

A revolver fired by Watkins was a signal to the party to close in. McGaha dashed in behind Jernigan and discharged his gun, mortally wounding Malone. McGaha testified he had not intended to fire but had tripped on a root, causing the gun to discharge. Without knowing that Malone had been wounded, he and Jernigan then pursued the Negro, who escaped after a chase.

THISTLETHWAITE QUITS AS WISCONSIN COACH

Maybe Coaches Can Find It Today.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

New York, Dec. 28.—The football coaches' union will meet here tomorrow under the presidency of Chick Meehan. Mr. Meehan recently beat his employers to the punch, resigning his job at New York university as a protest against the high pressure methods which were required of him in the fulfillment of the university's commercial football program. He got his resignation in just when the university itself, having got religion, was about to let him go and repudiate his kind of football coaching.

Now they both have religion. Mr. Meehan has a new job as coach at Manhattan college and he vows that from now on he will teach football only as 60 minutes of boyish fun. New York U. is looking for some one to teach football as nothing but 60 minutes of boyish fun there.

Times Are Different Now.

The coaches who will convene under Mr. Meehan's presidency are approaching a very hard time in their business. Several years ago they took over the game and professionalized it. In the last few years hundreds of young football players have gone through college, playing on the teams with no other professional ambition but to become assistant coaches first and presently head coaches in receipt of big salaries.

The profession is now badly overcrowded, even on the basis of the maximum opportunities which existed when the boom was on. It is the more overcrowded because college football is about to be deflated. There will be fewer jobs and the pay will be smaller.

One business, or professional, opportunity which the coaches have never considered is the professional game. There is no doubt now that the game is suitable for professional usage, but the professional development which has taken place has been wrought only by hard, courageous pioneering.

It Does Seem Strange.

The coaches themselves, in a union meeting held several years ago, decided that football was a beautiful, sacred thing and said they would protect it from the foul taint of professionalism, which was an odd expression coming from a lot of men who were professionals themselves, but at that time the professional game was not very well established. So they voted to exclude from their membership any one who should play any professional football after that date.

Football, itself, is a very good athletic show for the fall months, and the colleges, of course, will continue to play it, but they will be definitely retiring from the show business and leaving that phase of football more and more to professionals who are not too proud to make a dollar playing a game and are too smart to accept the rest of half of an attic bedroom and some dairy lunch meals in lieu of pay.

Coaches Still Can Help.

The coaches can help their profession by revoking their old verboten against professionals and acknowledging the opportunity for gainful employment for large numbers of players and coaches in the professional game. This game might never become a rival to professional baseball, but in the present it has suffered from an undeserved stigma which the coaches themselves, lacking foresight, placed upon it, and it has not reached its full development.

In tomorrow's meeting the coaches will consider a number of routine professional problems, but the boiling point will not be reached until they come to the hour which has been allotted for a discussion of proposed changes in the rules.

'Twas All Very Technical.

In previous years their interest in the rules was almost entirely confined to highly technical matters intended to minimize the element of chance and protect themselves in their jobs against accidental defeats which might reflect on the professional prestige of the man whose team was victim. Or one leader, teaching one style of football, would fight for a rule to restrict and hamper another leader's style.

But this year there were more than forty fatalities in football and, though most of them befell in noncollegiate games, the very statistics have raised an alarm, and some reform is demanded for the protection of the players.

The coaches are not the rules committee, but ordinarily their recommendations to the rules committee are given grave consideration. The chief dangers in the present rules seem to lie in two plays, the wedge formation used in returning the kickoff and the rabbit punch used by defensive linemen.

The Boys Are Divided.

The coaches are divided as to the dangers of the wedge, but they never admit the existence of the rabbit punch, because it is taught furtively, barred as a shove, and is intended to settle up the victim.

If the victim suffers concussion and hemorrhages from this beating, that is too bad, but one of the risks of a rough, manly sport and, anyway, a strong young fellow doesn't want to spend his life in the house.

EVERETT QUITS FLOOR 3 TIMES TO WIN DECISION

Earns Verdict Over Roper in Last 3 Rounds.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Buck Everett of Gary, former Golden Gloves champion, substituting for Les Marriner, won a ten round decision over Jack Roper of Louisiana in the windup of Mique Malloy's boxing show at White City last night. The program attracted about 1,200 customers, with an estimated gate of $1,100.

The decision apparently was something of a surprise to a minority in the house, who seemed to think Roper had earned a draw. He floored Buck with a left hook for an eight count in the third round and had him down for three and nine counts in the fifth.

Everett caught Roper off balance in the seventh and the latter went down, but was up before a count. Roper's infighting tactics were rather disorderly, and this, combined with rallies in the last three rounds by Everett, gave him the decision.

New Scoring System.

Promoter Malloy inaugurated his new customers' scoring system last night. Duplicate copies of the score card used by the state athletic commission were distributed to the fans and they were requested to keep their own count on the main bout.

The Everett-Roper argument was billed as the windup, but a couple of the preliminaries seemed to afford those in attendance more entertainment. The hero of the evening was found in one Bill August, an earnest young man from Louisville, who finally lost a six round decision to Dick Sisk of Chicago, but not until the crowd had booed the verdict long and loudly.

The August boy could not be called a boxer by any means, but a peculiar kind of footwork deceived Sisk into falling out of the ring once and won the crowd for William. His batting average was mediocre, but he fielded about 100 chances off Sisk's gloves without an error. They fought at 145 pounds.

Levine Beats Bozak.

Two Golden Glove graduates, Sammy Levine of Chicago and Joey Bozak of Blue Island, st uggled through five rounds and Sammy finally won the decision. They weighed 126 pounds.

Young Stuhley, Kewanee middleweight who had built up a winning streak of nine straight, made it ten by stopping Leo Bruce in the fifth round of a scheduled six rounder. Al Suttle whipped Benny Stanley in the opening bout. The semi-windup, which followed the windup on the program, saw Joie Freeman beat Billy Gladstone in six rounds. The fight was the fastest on the card. They met at 134 pounds.

HAWKS BATTLE BRUINS FOR 2D PLACE TONIGHT

Boston, Mass., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—The Chicago Blackhawks are here to renew hostilities with the Boston Bruins tomorrow. The teams are tied for second place in the United States division of the National Hockey league. Manager Ross of the Bruins has sent Joe Jerwa to the minors and recalled Yip Foster from the Canadian American league. George Owen, who has been leading the league's defense players in scoring, has been shifted to a forward line position.

Director A. A. Stagg's dream of a huge field house at the University of Chicago was realized yesterday when his holiday high school tournament opened in the new structure at 56th street and University avenue. Thirty-two teams are participating in the meet. Crane Tech of Chicago and Wateska, Ill., are shown during the first game of the meet, which the west siders won, 29 to 9. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Hurry, Boys! Tomorrow Is Deadline for Ski Entries

Entries close tomorrow at midnight for the second annual ski tournament sponsored by THE TRIBUNE and the commissioners of the northwest park district. All letters postmarked Dec. 30 will be accepted.

If there is not enough snow to hold the meet next Sunday at Riis park it will be postponed until Jan. 10, but the entry list, now being prepared, will certify contestants for the tournament whenever it is held. If it becomes necessary to postpone the tournament announcement will be made later this week.

The Boys Are Interested.

That the boys of Chicago and surrounding towns and cities are anxiously waiting for their first ski tournament is proved by the number of entries received, despite the fact that no opportunity has been afforded for practice.

The medals and team trophy will be ready for the tournament Sunday. There are 13 individual prizes, three in each of the four age classifications and one, a special gold medal, for the boy, regardless of age, who makes the longest jump of the competition. This award will be given for one jump, regardless of form. The other prizes are determined on a point system which rates total number of jumps and the form for each.

Tournament Is Certain.

SNOWSTORM PREVENTS PITT, BEARS GAME

Berkeley, Cal., Dec. 28.—(AP)—The University of Pittsburgh basketball team was marooned by a snow storm tonight aboard a passenger railway train near Truckee, Cal.

Failure of the eastern team to arrive here resulted in the University of California squad meeting the Oakland Athens club, instead of Pittsburgh, with whom a game had been scheduled.

Lee Thomas, Saddle Horse Judge, Dies at Lexington

Lexington, Ky., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Lee Thomas, 71 years old, widely known saddle horse man and judge of saddle horses at several shows and fairs throughout the country, died here today after 10 days' illness.

TENNIS CHAMPS BATTLE TONIGHT TO AID CHARITY

Ellsworth Vines, lanky California youth, who holds the national singles tennis title, will meet George Lott, Chicago Davis cup star, at the Chicago Stadium this evening in the feature match on an all star card for the benefit of the Joint Emergency Relief fund.

John Van Ryn and Frank X. Shields, both members of the American Davis cup team, will meet in the other singles event. They will arrive from the east in time to acquaint themselves with the Stadium court this afternoon.

Doubles Also Scheduled.

Van Ryn and Lott will comprise a doubles team that will face Shields and Vines after the two singles matches. Lott and Van Ryn are world's champions, having won at Wimbledon in the international matches last summer, and are favored tonight.

Lott, last summer, defeated Vines twice, but lost to the hard driving California youth in the finals of the national tournament at Forest Hills in August. Van Ryn and Shields, both of whom are famous in international tennis, will be settling an old argument.

Expect Record Crowd.

Ten thousand, the largest crowd that ever has witnessed a tennis match in Chicago, is expected to invade the Stadium tonight. They are expected to contribute approximately $20,000 to Gov. Emmerson's relief fund.

The committee in charge announced last evening, however, that there are several good blocks of reserved and general admission tickets on sale, although all boxes have been sold.

The results of the matches will be counted in the 1932 ranking of the stars, according to announcements by the National Lawn Tennis association, which has approved the matches this evening.

Six Chicago Prep Quintets Win as Stagg Meet Opens

Chicago basketball talent showed to advantage in the opening play of the Stagg high school tournament at the new University of Chicago fieldhouse yesterday afternoon and evening. Seven of the eight first round matches pitted Chicago league teams against squads from the suburbs or downstate, and in six of the contests the city boys emerged victorious.

The Stagg tournament, second of an annual series for the public schools of northern Illinois, officially opened the $700,000 Maroon athletic structure. Coach Stagg confined the initiation ceremony to the simple gesture of tossing out a new ball for the Crane Tech and Wateska teams to fight over.

Bob Gruenig, Crane center and giant of the city league, then proceeded to give the crowd of 2,500 a thrill by tapping in eleven baskets to give his team a 29 to 9 victory.

Lindblom Wins In Overtime.

Two more of the victories for city teams were walkaways. Tilden's 39 to 10 triumph over Swaney High of McNabb township, and Lane's 35 to 14 conquest of Proviso. Lindblom, defending champion, was forced to the limit in eliminating Riverside-Brookfield, 13 to 11, in an overtime session. The feature battle was strictly suburban when Morton High of Cicero took its revenge for a beating at the hands of Evanston last week by coming from behind in the closing minutes to win, 21 to 19.

New Trier upheld the honor of the suburbs by eliminating Tuley, 22 to 15.

Crane, Calumet, Tilden and Morton emerged as the class of the meet so far. Calumet, with Earl Keth, who was ruled ineligible last season because of participation in church games, back in uniform, showed a polished attack in defeating a strong five from Dundee, 31 to 22.

The Morton-Evanston match brought together fast, rangy teams with an old rivalry between them and the result was the best game of the day. Evanston went into a lead of 6 to 1 in the early minutes on long shots. With a high proportion of both teams' shots going into the hoop Morton crept up within 2 points of Evanston at the half, the score being 13 to 11.

Chick Hermanek, Morton sub, tied the score twice thereafter but Evanston still led, 19 to 18, at the end of the third quarter. The final period was closely fought and Jim Vopicka counted from the field to give Morton its victory.

Kaminski Leads Lane.

Starting slowly, Lane broke into a flurry of basket shooting in the last half of the final evening game and smothered Proviso, 35 to 14. None of the Lane regulars scored fewer than two baskets, while Kaminski led the attack with four field goals and two free throws. Lane led at the half, 10 to 6. Murray starred at guard for the losers and led his team's scoring with a pair of baskets.

Four baskets by Scheicher, guard, led Austin in a victory over Thornton, 20 to 11, in the first match of the evening round. Austin jumped into an early lead on baskets by Scheicher and Nelson, and had an advantage of 11 to 2 at the half. Thornton rallied with long goals by Nesbit and Boudreau but Austin pulled away again and stalled to the finish.

In the afternoon final Lindblom showed a strong defense, which was matched by Riverside-Brookfield, since

BOARD ACCEPTS WITHDRAWAL AT NIGHT SESSION

Little's Resignation Also Approved.

Madison, Wis., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—Glenn F. Thistlethwaite, head football coach at the University of Wisconsin for the last five years, tonight presented his resignation to Prof. J. A. F. Pyre, the university's faculty athletic leader. The resignation was accepted along with George Little's by the athletic council at a meeting tonight.

Mr. Little resigned as athletic director Dec. 14, after submitting plans for a reduced athletic budget for 1932 to the council.

Following is Thistlethwaite's letter of resignation:

"My dear Mr. Pyre:

"In order to permit complete freedom of action on the part of the athletic council in its reorganization plans as affecting intercollegiate athletic plans at Wisconsin, I desire to place in your hands for presentation to the council at its next meeting my request to be relieved of the duties of head football coach, effective June 30, 1932.

Respectfully yours,
"GLENN F. THISTLETHWAITE."

Came from Northwestern.

Thistlethwaite came to Wisconsin in 1927 after five years as head coach at Northwestern university. Prior to that he had coached at Oak Park High school for several years. He succeeded Little as Wisconsin gridiron leader when Little decided he could not handle his duties as athletic director and at the same time coach football.

Wisconsin elevens under Thistlethwaite have won ten Western conference games, lost 14 and tied two. During the season recently concluded the Badgers won three and lost three. Outside the conference they won from Bradley and North Dakota State, tied Alabama polytechnic and lost to Pennsylvania.

Far Down in 1927.

In 1927, Thistlethwaite's first year at Madison, Wisconsin finished far down in the conference standings, but in 1928 it held the lead until the last game of the season, when it lost to Minnesota, 6 to 0, and had to accept second place.

Injuries and the absence of a capable quarter back dropped the Badgers into the Big Ten depths again in 1929, but they climbed out in 1930 with two victories and a tie in five games, finishing in a tie for fourth place. The team started the 1930 season with overwhelming victories over Pennsylvania and Chicago.

Name Special Committee.

Taking cognizance of the controversy over university athletics, the state legislature recently named a special committee to investigate the athletic department. Although the committee was primarily created to investigate the financial side of the athletic department's trouble, it has indicated that it will also study the personnel.

Prior to the adjournment of both the athletic council and the legislative committee for the Christmas holidays it was learned that the members of the football team had secretly voted on the question of retaining or dismissing Coach Thistlethwaite. Capt. Harold Smith, who sponsored the vote, would not reveal the results of the balloting, but it was reported as unfavorable to the coach.

Future Plans in Doubt.

Reached at his home tonight Thistlethwaite said definitely he would continue as a coach, but said he had no idea where the scene of his next endeavors would be. He gave two reasons for his decision leading to resignation: [1] Recent publicity in regard to competitive athletics at Wisconsin had created a situation in which his coaching would be faced with a psychological handicap, and [2] because the athletic council's plans would require extensive readjustments and he did not wish to be in the way of their solution.

Graduated from Earlham.

Coach Thistlethwaite was graduated from Earlham college, Richmond, Ind., in 1908. He played tackle on the football team, captained the 1908 squad and managed to win the coveted Phi Beta Kappa award for scholarship. He coached Illinois college, Jacksonville, Ill., for one year and then returned to his alma mater as head coach from 1909 to 1913. He succeeded Robert Zuppke as coach at Oak Park, Ill., High school and went from there to Northwestern in 1922.

LOYOLA FIVE OR BUTLER GETS 1ST DEFEAT TONIGHT

Games Tonight

Loyola at Butler.
Montana State at Purdue.
Nebraska at Minnesota.

Two of the leading midwestern basketball teams undefeated this season meet in Indianapolis tonight when Loyola university of Chicago and Butler university play their fourth annual game.

Loyola will be seeking its seventh victory and vengeance for a 27 to 12 defeat last year. Butler also won, 27 to 17, in 1928, while Loyola gathered its lone victory in 1930, 22 to 14.

WHERE IS THAT CALIFORNIA SUN? TULANE INQUIRES

Downpour Sends Wave, Trojans Indoors.

Pasadena, Cal., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—Tulane's football team, which meets Southern California in the Rose Bowl game here New Year's day, today gave up hopes of seeing any of the sunshine that made California famous and began to revamp its attack to suit a rainsoaked field.

A torrential rain, which started last night and continued all day today, drove the Green Wave into Pasadena Civic auditorium for its practice. The players held a brief dummy scrimmage and signal practice while the rain beat on the roof.

Trojans Take Mental Drill.

On the Trojan campus, a few miles away, Coach Howard Jones also kept his athletes out of the rain. Practice consisted of a strictly mental workout on defense for Tulane plays.

There is no covering available for the Tournament park field, where the game will be played. Pumps were kept going to carry off the surface water, but the downpour was more than a match for them.

The forecast for tomorrow is more rain and more pumps.

Coach Bernie Bierman, whose predictions of overwhelming defeat have won him the 1931 championship among football blues singers, thought up another chorus today.

"Tulane averages several pounds lighter than Southern California and will be at a disadvantage on a wet field," Bierman said.

Natives Promise Sun.

Natives present assured him that the California sun was sure to come out one of these days and dry the turf. The southern players fear they will not see any sunshine until they go home to New Orleans.

A glance at the record books makes fans wonder just why the prospect of a muddy gridiron is so discouraging to the Tulane coach. Ten of the Green Wave's 11 victories this season have been scored in the mud. A wet ball seems to take nothing from the effectiveness of Don Zimmerman's passes, the chief offensive threat of the southern champions.

Mud Would Hamper Trojans.

Southern California, on the other hand, has played only once on a wet field. That was against California, and the Trojans had trouble squeezing out a 6 to 0 victory.

Coach Howard Jones has hidden his men in a Los Angeles hotel between workouts to keep them from well wishers, autograph hounds, and other disturbing influences.

DRY FIELD FOR EAST

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 28.—(AP)—For the first time in a week, football stars who will meet here New Year's day in the annual east-west charity game, worked out today on a dry field.

Eastern and western coaches took advantage of the turn in weather to send their charges through heavy practice. Passing plays came in for considerable attention, with the ball fit to handle and players able to toss it distances without danger of wild heaves. Andy Kerr of Colgate, coach of the easterners, sent the boys through their paces at Palo Alto while Dick Hanley of Northwestern, the other coach, was recovering from a cold.

At Berkeley, the western players dashed through their plays with a snap that brought smiles to the faces of Dana X. Bible of Nebraska and Percy Locey of the Olympic club, coaches. Outweighed by their eastern rivals and outnumbered in the matter of individual stars, the western players will have an advantage of speed Coaches Bible and Locey plan to capitalize on this to the utmost.

CHAMPION WINS TWICE IN JUNIOR BILLIARD MEET

Robert Moore of Grand Rapids, Mich., present titleholder, and Arthur Cranfield of Syracuse, N. Y., eastern champion, held the lead at the end of the first day of play in the national junior pocket billiard championship tournament at the Lincoln-Belmont Y. M. C. A., 3332 Marshfield avenue, yesterday.

Moore defeated Nicholas Oliva of Lincoln-Belmont, the Chicago Y. M. C. A. champion, in the afternoon by 75 to 29, in 17 innings, and at night he triumphed over Charles Cacciapaglia of Rockford, Ill., midwestern titleholder, 75 to 28, in 16 innings. Moore had high runs of 15 against Oliva and 17 against Cacciapaglia. Oliva's high run was 10, Cacciapaglia's 15.

Cranfield scored in the afternoon over Cacciapaglia, 75 to 59, in 13 innings and at night he defeated Oliva, 75 to 28, in 16 innings. Cranfield had a run of 16 in the afternoon and 24 at night.

Cacciapaglia, against Cranfield, set a new national junior high run mark with an effort of 34, breaking the mark of 32 set by Anthony Guigliano of Brooklyn in the eastern tourney in New York last year. Oliva's high run against Cranfield was 9.

Schedule for today:
2 o'clock—Cacciapaglia vs. Oliva.
3 o'clock—Moore vs. Cranfield.

CHARITY TENNIS.

DESPITE the fact that charity, the Emergency Relief fund, is the lure, local tennis officials deserve credit for bringing to Chicago the four notable players who will compete at the Stadium tonight. It is a show worth the price of admission on its own merit, which The Wake maintains should be the standard for benefits really hoping to net proceeds for charity.

In another respect these officials have acted wisely. While those charitably minded, or those who do not mind the price, may pay $3 or as much more as they wish for box seats, Mr. John Public may occupy good seats for 50 cents and $1. Old John, by the way, is the difference between financial success and financial failure in such undertakings.

Tennis interest, per se, in the exhibitions centers in the fact that this quartet of net stars includes the more immediate hopes of American world supremacy on the courts. Since Tilden, Richards, Bill Johnston, and others are gone from competition by turning pro or going into retirement, recovery of the Davis international bowl, now held by France, rests on younger players. It has so rested for several years.

France's formerly invincible aces are said by experts abroad to be waning. It may not come this year, but the end of their tenure is in sight. France, too, has youngsters coming up, but they are not as far advanced as the British and American boys, between whom international rivalry is now keen.

Ellsworth Vines, 20 year old national champion; George Lott, Chicago product; Francis Shields and Johnny Van Ryn, Wimbledon doubles winners, are almost sure of places on the 1932 Davis cup team. It is a galaxy capable of fine tennis if floor conditions are favorable. They are players whose skill tennis followers will be glad to judge, apart from any desire to aid charity.

Benton Harbor is proud of its football products. Therefore Helper Bud Cole protests the published statements that Capt. Summerfelt of Army's 1932 eleven is a Chicago boy. Milton Summerfelt's family lives in the Michigan city and he developed there as a prep. Brief attendance at Northwestern was Chicago's only claim, according to Helper Bud. Bill Calderwood, former Purple star; Buss of Michigan State, and Bernard, Michigan's sensational sophomore center, likewise are Benton Harborites.

May 7 Set as Kentucky Derby Day

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—Kentucky Derby day will be May 7, a week before the Preakness. Churchill Downs, Incorporated, was granted 19 days at a meeting of the Kentucky racing commission this afternoon. The meeting at the Downs will begin April 30 and close on Saturday, May 21.

Neither Lexington nor Latonia asked for dates from the racing commission at the last meeting of its four years' reign. It is said that Gov. Laffoon shortly will appoint a new racing commission and this body will take up the proposal of dates for Lexington and Latonia when presented.

BAY AGNON WINS

Miami, Fla., Dec. 28.—[Special]—Edgar A. Inglehart's Bay Angon led home a field of eight juveniles in the Avenue of Palms purse, the best event on the card at Tropical park today. The race, under claiming conditions, was over a distance of five and one-half furlongs.

Bay Angon, a bay gelding by Angon-Miss Washington, finished four lengths ahead of John Messler's Captain Ed. Captain Ed had to finish under a drive in order to take the place from the favorite, P. S. P. Randolph's Lady Blue.

The Orange County purse, secondary feature, brought to Henry Rosebacher's Bacciocco the distinction of being the first double winner of the meeting.

Seeing Snakes? Don't Pour It Out; Weather to Blame

BY BOB BECKER.

Christmas or New Year's week is no time for a citizen of Chicagoland to be seeing snakes. But here is A. W. Wolff, 4734 North Keating avenue, coming up with a snake story that scores another hit for Chicago's delightful winter climate and establishes a record for something or other.

Mr. Wolff writes that three days before Christmas he discovered a snake taking the air and apparently all mixed up on the months. Here is his description of the incident:

"This afternoon, while walking along Cicero avenue near Lawrence avenue, I discovered a fair sized grass snake, sunning himself on a large stone. I am an old time hunter and something of an amateur naturalist, but I never saw a snake at this time of the year. In fact, it constitutes a record in my experience for December and this locality."

Apparently Mr. Wolff is taking no chances on any one impeaching the accuracy of his report, because he is holding the evidence. He says:

"Fearing that some of my well meaning friends, upon hearing this tale, might insinuate that I had prematurely overindulged in Christmas good cheer, I took the snake home with me, alive and unharmed, and I have it in my possession to back up my story."

If this mild winter weather continues or sends the thermometer any higher we may be seeing other members of the "winter sleep" family, those animals, reptiles, or amphibians that ordinarily dig in and sleep in a dormant condition through the cold months. This group reacts to temperature and can't figure out when they are being fooled by the weather man.

However, snakes are not the only ones upset by December warm weather.

A few days ago, when we were driving home from Mount Carroll, Ill., we saw outdoor fans, who normally would be carrying shotguns across snow covered fields in pursuit of rabbits, hiking down the road with fishing tackle. Through the holidays a number of fishermen along Rock river went back to the old sport of hooking catfish instead of hunting rabbits.

Crane took a 9 to 1 first quarter lead when Dave Minkus and Lefty Dembo, guards, constantly fed the ball to Gruenig under the hoop. New Trier, Suburban league entry, overcame a third quarter lead to defeat Tuley in a game which started slowly, but wound up in a fast fourth period.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: We Live and Learn

Dusek to Hold 20 Pound Edge Over Londos

Jim Londos and Rudy Dusek will take light drills today in preparation for their finish battle tomorrow night in the Coliseum. Londos will weigh 200, which is 20 less than the Nebraska challenger.

The show is promoted by Joe Coffey, who has arranged four supporting matches. Hans Kampfer is paired against George Zaharias, Colorado Greek, in the semi-windup.

McMillen Faces Mondt.

Jim McMillen takes on Joe [Toots] Mondt, veteran from Colorado; Earl McCready, 239 pound Oklahoma giant, mixes with Jack Roller, St. Louis; Fred Grobmier, Iowa body scissors ace, has been substituted for Kola Kwariani to take on Sailor Jack Lewis.

A checkup on Londos and Dusek discloses that Dusek has the physical edge. He is 29 years old to Jim's 33, is just as tall, 5 feet 8 inches, and packs 20 more pounds. Londos is conceded an edge in cleverness.

Asks Ruling on Hold.

Londos is expected to demonstrate his neck look in the offices of the Illinois athletic commission the afternoon of the match for a ruling as to its legality. It is with this weapon that the Greek conquered Rudy in Washington and the latter is leading a fight to have it barred as a strangle hold in disguise.

YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE SOLVED

WOMAN STRUCK BY AUTO; FIND BRAKES FAULTY

Driver Is Held by the Police.

An automobile driver whose car, equipped with defective brakes, ran down Miss Helen Brady, 42 years old, 3009 South Wood street, a worker for the Catholic Mission, 126 North Des Plaines street, was held by Des Plaines street police last night.

He is Jacob Chidekel, 46 years old, 3338 North Paulina street. Miss Brady is in the West Side hospital, suffering from a possible skull fracture and in a serious condition.

The accident occurred at Randolph and Halsted streets. Police, in compliance with a recent order that brakes on all machines figuring in accidents be inspected, put Chidekel's car through routine tests. Policeman William Garchow reported that "the brakes did not work at all." Later Msgr. William Cummings, in charge of the Catholic Mission, was advised of the findings.

"An automobile is dangerous at all times," he said. "But the use of one without good brakes is criminal negligence."

Follows Husband in Death.

Mrs. Anna Hemphill, 50 years old, 3315 North Kildare avenue, died last night in the Belmont hospital of injuries suffered Christmas eve when she and her husband were struck by an automobile in front of 4123 Addison street. Fred Hemphill, 50 years old, her husband, died Christmas day. They were on their way to celebrate the holiday at the home of a friend. Herman Swanson, 34 years old, 859 Belmont avenue, the driver, was charged with assault with an automobile.

This death and two others raised the 1931 Cook county auto toll to 1,282. The other victims:

GAMBLER SLAIN BY 3 GANGSTERS AT SPRINGFIELD

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Charles Dawson, 49, known here for twenty years as a gambler and alleged by police to have been known to St. Louis police as a bootlegger, was slain tonight by three men with shotguns. Authorities blame St. Louis gangsters.

Police learned that shortly before his death, Dawson received a telephone call asking him to meet some one at the corner of 7th and Washington streets, a block from the central police station.

Dawson walked from his place of business, a few blocks away, to the appointed place. As he arrived, a man carrying a shotgun stepped from the tonneau of a large automobile parked at the curb with motor running, and fired a charge into Dawson's head. Two other men stepped from nearby shadows and fired other shotgun charges into the gambler's body.

FRANCE TO BUY 200,000 TONS OF GERMAN NITRATE

PARIS, Dec. 28.—(AP)—An agreement for the purchase of German soda nitrate by France to supplement nitrates imported from Chile was reached today by the newly organized Franco-German econgmic commission.

It was also learned that representatives of Norwegian, Chilean and American producers had offered to supply France with 125,000 tons—equal to the usual war reserve—in exchange for new permits to export nitrates to this country.

The Franco-German transaction, involving 200,000 tons, will just meet French requirements for agricultural purposes, experts said.

ROCKEFELLER ON JURY AWARDING $17,500 VERDICT

New York, Dec. 28.—[Special.]—John D. Rockefeller Jr., as juror No. 12 on a sheriff's blue ribbon jury, helped return a verdict of $17,500 this afternoon against the Automatic Supply company and the International Automatic Supply company for Ernest M. Howe, assignee of a number of razor blade vending machines, who tustified that these defendant companies had broken their contract to take over 20,000 machines from the Casau Automatic Venders, Inc.

Supreme Court Justice Richard H. Mitchell, after hearing argument earlier, directed the sheriff to call a jury to decide the damages sustained by the complainant. With Undersheriff Peter J. Curran presiding, Mr. Howe told of the contract made in the early part of 1930. During the testimony of the only witness Mr. Rockefeller was noticed to make a number of notes.

The jury was out less than five minutes. The award was for the full amount claimed by Mr. Howe.

David R. Forgan, Chicago banking leader, was buried yesterday in Rosehill cemetery. A private funeral service, attended by members of the family in the residence at 1112 Greenwood boulevard, Evanston, was followed by public services conducted in the First Presbyterian church of Evanston by Dr. John Timothy Stone, president of the Presbyterian Theological seminary, and the Rev. The choir sang Mr. Forgan's favorite hymn, "O Lord and Father of Mankind," Dr. Stone quoted from the collected speeches of Mr. Forgan at various public gatherings in discussing his character and ideals.

Mr. Forgan, who died Saturday of a heart attack superinduced by other ailments, was 69 years old. He was co-chairman of the directorate of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company.

CLYDE SHIPYARDS END WORST YEAR; SHOW 70% DROP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 28.—The shipyards on the Clyde have just completed the worst year in the history of the industry. The reduction below the 1930 output is announced as a full 70 per cent.

The production for the last twelve months of 101 vessels, aggregating 152,666 tons, compares with 249 vessels, aggregating 529,526 tons in 1930. The record year was 1913, when 377 ships, totaling 766,490 tons, were constructed.

Marine engineering slumped from 644,874 horsepower during 1930 to 186,937 horsepower in 1931. Only two out of twenty-one producing yards are supplied with orders. There are 140,000 tons of work on hand, but half of this involves the abandoned Cunard liner.

GARDNER HALE, MURAL PAINTER, KILLED IN CRASH

Santa Maria, Cal., Dec. 28.—(AP)—The body of Gardner Hale, 38, of New York, one of America's foremost young painters of murals and frescoes, was found today at the bottom of a 500 foot precipice 40 miles south of Santa Maria, where his automobile had plunged from a highway.

Hale's body, apparently catapulted from the machine as it plunged into the canyon, was lying near the wreck.

The painter, whose works are to be found through France, in many large buildings in this country and in the residences of some of America's weathiest families, had left Long Beach, Cal., late yesterday by automobile for San Francisco. He was traveling alone.

He and his wife, the former Dorothy A. Donovan of New York, had come to California recently for a six months' stay.

He was born in Chicago and graduated from Harvard university. He studied in Rome, Venice, New York and Paris. Among his best accomplishments are the murals in the Merchants Trust building of Chicago.

ROMANTIC DUKE TO HEAD ITALIAN SHIP COMBINE

GENOA, Italy, Dec. 28.—(AP)—The duke of Abruzzi, cousin of the king, will head a merger of Italy's largest three steamship companies, Lloyd Sabaudo, Navigazione Generale Italiana and Cosulich, according to reliable reports today. Representatives of those three lines, which amalgamated three months ago, will meet on Saturday.

The duke is a romantic and colorful figure. He has explored in Africa and the Arctic. He has shot big game and climbed some of the highest mountains in the world. Once he was mentioned as the possible king of Albania and once he gave a beggar $18,000 he had won in a lottery.

For about five years, from 1907 to 1913, society of two continents was on tenter hooks as his engagement to Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of the United States senator from West Virginia, was reported and denied. Miss Elkins married another man in 1913.

SUICIDES SWEEP JAPAN; RESULT OF HARD TIMES

TOKIO, Dec. 29.—[Tuesday.]—The extent of the critical economic conditions of the Japanese people, aggravated by the Chinese economic boycott against Japan, is reflected in an alarming increase in suicides.

A family of six committed "group suicide" in Tokio, while a family of seven at Nagoya also attempted suicide. In Tokio a former policeman, Yoneji Kumakura, strangled his wife and three children and his wife's sister, then hanged himself, after dressing the family in their best clothes and painting their faces. He had been out of work for several months.

In Nagoya, Seisaku Takahashi, a stationer, tried to kill his family of seven with rat poison because of a business failure. All were in a serious condition today. Cases of individual suicides due to the depression are so numerous that they are not even mentioned in the newspapers.

CUBAN FOLK HAVE GOOD CLEAN FUN ON "CRAZY DAY"

HAVANA, Cuba, Dec. 28.—(AP)—This was a "crazy day" in Havana. People went about saying President Machado had resigned and that New York's Jimmy Walker would be the next president; they said there was another revolution in Oriente province that the cabinet had quit and congress had been dissolved; they swore American battleships were on the way down.

But it was all good, clean fun. This is Cuba's "Dia de los Santos Inocentes," which, liberally translated, means about the same thing as April Fool's day in the United States.

BODY IDENTIFIED BY 8, VICTIM IS FOUND ALIVE

A body taken from the lake at North avenue on Dec. 18 was identified at the county morgue as that of Abraham N. Cohen, 55 years old. Two stepsons of Cohen and six friends made the identification.

Preparations for the funeral which was to be held yesterday were made and friends of Cohen were mourning him. One of these friends was Frank Rabinowitz, who owns a grocery at 1257 South Troy street. Rabinowitz was considerably surprised yesterday afternoon when he met an old familiar face in a notion store at 837 West Roosevelt road.

"I am on my way to your funeral," he said, "and here you are. I am going to take you to the police."

The man he seized and took to the Maxwell street police station was Abraham N. Cohen. The funeral was halted and the body of the man which was to have been buried as that of Mr. Cohen was taken back to the county morgue to await another identification.

Senator Moses Refuses $15,000 Year Radio Job

Concord, N. H., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Friends of Senator George H. Moses revealed today he had refused $15,000 a year for a 15 minutes, one a week radio broadcast of congressional comment. They quoted the senator to the effect that if he remained in the senate he couldn't say what he thought on the air without trespassing on delicate territory and that if he didn't say what he thought, his views wouldn't be worth a nickel."

LEVIATHAN GIVEN HOLIDAY; HASN'T THE PASSENGERS

New York, Dec. 28.—[Special.]—After only one trip for her new operators, the liner Leviathan was laid up today for an indefinite period "because there was nothing for her to carry."

The ship's projected ten day cruise to the West Indies was canceled last week for lack of patronage, and today the Roosevelt-International Mercantile Marine lines canceled the Atlantic crossing which was to begin on Jan. 6, and ordered the big vessel to her pier in Hoboken.

All but about sixty members of the crew of some 900 were paid off and laid off.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 7,000; hogs, 35,000; sheep, 15,000.

There was another rush to buy hogs yesterday when the wholesale price of pork loins went up another cent to the highest level since Nov. 30. Buyers were able to save as much as 5@10c on many purchases and held the average for the whole day down 5c at $4.40, but the clearance was the best of the season and only pen holders remained at the finish, the strongest point of the market. Outside demand for light hogs was the broadest since early in the year. Eastern buyers obtained about 20,000. Only two or three days in the last three years are credited with larger shipments.

The fact that some of the smaller houses had not slaughtered hogs since last Thursday added zest when their buyers entered the market. Numerous loads of light weight hogs went to shippers at $4.55@4.60, the top prices, while the bulk of all grades sold at $4.25@4.50. The spread between light and heavy is expanding more. The trade expects continued good eastern demand for light weights. During the last three years shipments of hogs from Chicago during January have been largest of the year.

March Hogs Bid $5.

There were buyers for $5 March contracts on the futures trade yesterday, but the lowest offer to sell stopped at $5.50 in that month. All January and February contracts were bid $4.25 and some February heavy grades were offered at $5.25.

Cattle receipts showed a substantial increase compared with last week's abnormally light supplies and, with the total only moderate for Monday at this time of year, the trade moved along fairly rapidly at strong prices. The market held firm all along the line at the start and light cattle finished at the high point of the day, but sellers were unable to keep medium and weighty kinds from sagging late and some carried a few over for today rather than grant the concessions of 25@50c insisted on by late buyers.

Closing rounds showed that the trade is in no condition to cope with more than moderate supplies and the country is being warned to load lightly for the remainder of the week. Fancy 1,039 lb steers topped the list at $11.00, while some 1,219 lb averages brought $10.85. Few heavy cattle sold above $8.50. Cows and heifers made up a small share of the receipts and ruled strong to 25c higher. Stockers and feeders were also scarce and strong.

Sheep Receipts Increase.

The pre-holiday upturn in lamb prices brought the expected increase in sheep receipts and reversed the trend of the market. Action was good at the close, however, and last sales were highest of the day, with large local packers strongest competitors after attempting to take off 50 cents on first rounds of the trade. Several carloads to packers on shipper account reached $6.25 at the finish, while numerous sales of medium to good grades went to all interests at $5.75@6.00. Aged sheep were steady. Yearlings declined in sympathy with the 25 cent break in lamb prices, with best light weights at $4.75. Feeder lambs were quoted steady.

LARD DELIVERIES HEAVY

Heavy deliveries of lard, almost 1,000,000 lbs. on December contracts caused liquidation on all futures yesterday and the market closed at the lowest of the day on sales of 22½@20c, the latter on December. A little buying of May lard by interests who accumulated it last week was the only other feature of importance in the trade. Hog receipts were lower with prospects light, especially at outside markets. Exports of lard for the week were 11,340,000 lbs. against 6,115,000 lbs. against 9,279,000 lbs the last year. Liverpool lard was unchanged. Prices follow:

RAIL EARNINGS FOR NOVEMBER CONTINUE DROP

Hope Seen of Pickup in January.

BY O. A. MATHER.

The drab tale of meager railroad earnings was repeated yesterday in additional monthly statements issued by a number of carriers. November earnings of more than half of the class 1 railroads disclose that last month made as poor a showing compared with November, 1930, as did the comparative figures for October.

No improvement in earnings is expected this month, compared with last month, although December earnings may show less drastic declines from a year ago, as the downward trend was in full swing in December, 1930. However, next month may witness some improvement, as the carriers will have the benefit of higher freight rates, which will go into effect on Jan. 4. The railroads yesterday were preparing formal notices of the increased rates. Then, too, there is a possibility that the labor unions may voluntarily accept the 10 per cent cut in wages proposed by the railroad managements.

November Figures.

The first 40 railroads to issue November earnings statements had total net railway operating income of $19,165,000, compared with $46,556,000 in November, 1930, a decrease of 37.3 per cent. Such income for October was $49,537,000, which was 37 per cent below the October, 1930, figure. Gross revenue last month totaled $195,206,000, compared with $233,871,000 in October and $265,730,000 in November, 1930.

The following table shows net railway operating income of railroads issuing reports yesterday, with a comparison of the November figures with those of November, 1930:

Cash Position Strong.

Although the Chicago and North Western incurred a deficit last month, net income for the eleven months this year was $6,064,192, compared with $16,397,323 for the same period in 1930. President Fred W. Sargent pointed out that the road's cash position amply assures the meeting of immediate obligations. In the category of operating expenses last month, the charge for maintenance of way was $1,350,000, but the actual expenditures were only $573,000. Operating expenses for this year to date have been reduced more than $15,000,000 compared with the same period last year, which partly offsets a decline of $25,844,000 in gross revenues.

The Illinois Central was one of the few roads to show larger earnings last month than a year ago, the increase being $43,194. However, net income of $10,316,838 for the eleven months this year was less than half such income for the same period in 1930. The Delaware & Hudson, the Reading and several of the smaller roads also did better last month than in November, 1930. The Rock Island had a deficit of $957,396, after taxes and charges, last month, compared with net income of $182,285 in November, 1930. The Atchison, Pennsylvania, Atlantic Coast Line and several others last month did better than in October, also worse than a year ago.

Elect Teter Chairman of Realty Firm

Lucius Teter, vice chairman of the executive committee and a director of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company, announced last night that he will retire from the banking field to enter that of real estate, having been elected chairman of the board of directors of Baird & Warner. He will take up his new duties with this seventy-seven year old real estate organization early in the coming year. Mr. Teter will continue to serve as a director of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company.

This affiliation follows a successful banking career of many years in Chicago, first as one of the founders of the Chicago Trust company, of which he was head for many years, later as vice chairman of the executive committee of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company.

Optimistic of Realty Future.

In regard to his contemplated change Mr. Teter said: "It is only after mature deliberation that I've decided to leave my pleasant banking associations to take an active interest in real estate as a real estate man. The future of real estate, quite apart from conditions which we are convinced are temporary, is one of growth and development.

"The management of real estate has become within recent years a science in itself. In keeping with other basic industries, real estate calls for vision and imagination. An opportunity to join an old established organization which has kept abreast of the times appeals to me strongly, and while I leave my former associates with regret, I anticipate the future with eagerness."

Indicates Soundness.

"Mr. Teter's acceptance of the chairmanship of the board is another indication of the soundness and the future possibilities of Chicago real estate," said Warner G. Baird, president of Baird & Warner, Inc. "His active service with this organization will bring to the present day problems of property management, mortgages, and real estate his long experience and banker's viewpoint which, it is my belief, will be looked upon increasingly with favor in real estate circles."

Mr. Teter has long been a resident of Lake Forest, having an attractive estate at 1570 North Waukegan road, adjoining the grounds of the Knollwood Country club.

CLOSE 3 BANKS IN N. CAROLINA; ONE IN ALBANY

Goldsboro, N. C., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Three Wayne county banks did not open for business today and a fourth closed a few minutes after depositors started a small run.

The First National bank of Mount Olive was closed after what officials described as a run. They said they hoped, with agreement of depositors, the bank could reopen in ten or twelve days. Its deposits were listed at $237,-000. The other banks are the Wayne National bank of Goldsboro, the Citizens bank of Mount Olive, and the Bank of Pikeville of Pikeville. Their combined deposits were $2,321,095.34.

Bank Closes in New York.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 28.—(AP)—The Bank of North Hempstead, at Port Washington, Long Island, was closed today. Deposits at the close of business Dec. 26 were given as $2,100,000.

Hear Montgomery Ward May Show Net Deficit

Montgomery Ward & Co. may show a net deficit for the year if the management adopts a policy of writing off inventory losses, it is believed in financial circles. What policy the new management, headed by Sewell L. Avery, chairman, will follow regarding inventories is not known, but it is felt that the amount of the deficit will depend on the extent of the write-off. The net deficit on Sept. 30 was $2,400,000. It is understood that sales in the current quarter, which is ordinarily profitable, fell below earlier estimations.

GUARANTY CO. TO CUT ITS CAPITAL STOCK IN HALF

New York, Dec. 28.—(AP)—A further step in the partial withdrawal of large banks from the securities distribution business appeared today in an announcement of the reduction of the capital stock of the Guaranty company of New York, an affiliate of the Guaranty Trust company.

Joseph R. Swan, president, announced that the directors had authorized legal steps to reduce the capital stock from $20,000,000 to $10,000,000 par value. To accomplish the reduction, the Guaranty company will purchase at par value of $10,000,000 the amount of 100,000 shares of its own stock from the Guaranty Trust company, the sole stockholder. Thus, the company will transfer to the bank $10,000,000 of its surplus. Mr. Swan said the decision arose from the fact "that the company has at the present time surplus funds which it does not deem necessary for the conduct of its business."

Similar action has recently been proposed by the Chase Securities corporation, an affiliate of the Chase National bank. A meeting of stockholders has been called to act upon a proposal to reduce Chase Securities capital.

G. M. TRUCK CORP. GETS ORDER FOR 1,000 TAXICABS

New York, Dec. 28.—(AP)—P. H. Geyser, president of the Terminal Cab corporation, announced today that an order for 1,000 new taxicabs had been placed with the General Motors Truck corporation. This is one of the largest orders for automotive equipment on record.

Predicts 3,000,000 Car Year.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 28.—(AP)—In a survey of the motor industry the Cleveland Trust company says present indications point to a production of approximately 3,000,000 automobiles in 1932. This would be a 20 per cent increase over indicated 1931 output.

INT'L PAPER CO. DEFERS ACTION ON PFD. DIVIDEND

New York, Dec. 28.—(AP)—International Power company, Ltd., holding and operating company for a number of foreign power properties, has deferred payment of the quarterly dividend on the 7 per cent first preferred normally payable Jan. 1, 1932. The dividend is cumulative. Of the issue, 80,000 shares with a par value of $100 each remain outstanding. The stock is listed on the Montreal Stock exchange.

The Owl Drug company deferred action on the semi-annual dividend of 4 per cent on the 8 per cent cumulative preferred stock due at this time.

19,127 Hogs Go to Market by Truck, a New Record

Sioux City, Ia., Dec. 28.—[Special.]—A new all time record for hogs received by truck at the Sioux City live stock market was set Monday when 19,127 hogs were received in that manner. The previous high, established last Jan. 27, was 18,723.

WINS POSTPONEMENT OF I. C. C. ORDER TO DIVEST RAIL HOLDINGS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Dec. 28.—The Pennsylvania railroad and the Pennsylvania company today won an indefinite postponement of the interstate commerce commission order which would have forced the companies to divest themselves of their holdings of Wabash and Lehigh Valley stock.

The order was issued by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals and stays execution of the I. C. C. order until after the commission has finally ruled on the eastern railroad consolidation problem.

Judges Buffington and Thompson heard the application by Henry Wolf Bikle, counsel for the railroad. It was suggested to William H. Bonneville, counsel for the commission, that he urge the commission to decide the consolidation cases as quickly as possible.

Mr. Bonneville had objected to any delay in the hearing of the Pennsylvania cases on the ground that the consolidation matter is coming up again before the commission in January, the effect of the ruling may be that the Pennsylvania cases will be heard in March or before.

PORTER CHOSEN CHAIRMAN OF I. C. C. FOR 1932

Washington, D. C., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Claude R. Porter of Iowa has been elected chairman of the interstate commerce commission for 1932, it was announced today. He succeeds Commissioner Ezra Brainerd Jr.

Mr. Porter was appointed a member of the commission by President Coolidge in 1928, to fill the unexpired term of Commissioner Henry C. Hall, who resigned. Mr. Porter is a Democrat and has been the Democratic candidate for the governorship of Iowa and for the United States senate.

He has served in both branches of the Iowa legislature, and prior to his appointment to the Interstate Commerce commission served as United States attorney for the southern district of Iowa, as special assistant attorney general, and later as chief counsel for the Federal Trade commission.

ENAMEL FIRM PAYS 5 CENTS ON COMMON STOCK

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 28.—Enamel Products company declared a dividend of 5 cents quarterly on its common. This is the first payment made by the Cleveland concern since January, 1930, when regular dividends at the rate of $2 annually were paid.

The Railroad Securities company declared a semi-annual dividend of $12.50 on the Illinois Central 4 per cent stock interest certificates. Six months ago a semi-annual payment of $20 was made. The payment represents the balance remaining undistributed to security holders realized from the dividends on the company's holdings of Illinois Central stock pledged under the stock interest certificates.

FIRESTONE TIRE REPORTS NET OF SIX MILLIONS

Termed Best Showing in Its History.

Akron, O., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Net profit of $6,028,630, quadrupling figures of a year ago, was announced today by the Firestone Tire and Rubber company for the fiscal year ending Oct. 31, 1931.

The profit, after depreciation, federal taxes and all other charges, compares with $1,541,034 in 1930, and the report is termed "the best statement the Firestone organization ever made."

Covers Dividends.

The statement for the first half of the present fiscal year, released some months ago, showed a net profit of $2,908,553, so that the last six months' profit is revealed as $211,524 greater than the preceding six months' figure. The 1930 profit failed to cover preferred dividends. The profit just reported more than provides for both preferred and common dividends.

Sales Are $113,797,282.

Sales for the year were $113,797,282, according to the report. The statement, President H. S. Firestone Sr. declares, is, "in view of the conditions and difficulties of the last year, the best statement from a sales and profit standpoint the Firestone organization ever made."

He predicts "a considerably greater amount of business in 1932."

The prediction is based on the assertion that in 1930 and 1931 fully 20 per cent more tire mileage was consumed than was sold.

Report Nash Co.'s Cash, Bonds Total $36,000,000

It is understood that the annual report of Nash Motors company, expected early in January, will show cash and government security holdings totaling almost $36,600,000, or around $13.40 a share on the company's stock. A year ago cash and securities held amounted to $38,100,000.

"Buy at Home" Programs Tend to Isolate Markets

BY SCRUTATOR.

The Wisconsin legislature has passed a law which is to become effective Jan. 1, imposing heavy taxes on oleomargarine. Each manufacturer of this product must pay $1,000 annually, wholesalers are to be assessed $500 per year, retailers $25, and bakers, boarding house keepers, and hotels that use it will be taxed $5.

In addition, retailers and others dispensing oleomargarine to the public must report quarterly to the state department of agriculture the amount of sales and pay a tax of 6 cents per pound on all sales.

This action is expected to reduce greatly the amount of oleomargarine consumed in Wisconsin, which is what those who urged the new law had in mind. On Dec. 16, when the measure passed the state senate, a pageant depicting the downfall of oleomargarine was being held outside the state capitol.

Sponsors of the statute declared that it would bring relief to suffering farmers and aid Wisconsin's big industry, its dairy business.

The reasoning behind legislation of this kind is that if you can keep your home market for your own product and continue to sell the same amount as before in other markets you will be better off.

Tariff walls built along state lines are forbidden by the federal constitution, but there are other ways of keeping the products of states A, B, C, and D out of state E than by imposing tariffs. The result is often a tariff wall in everything but name.

California keeps out fruit from other states. The argument in this case is that this protection is necessary to prevent the spread of certain plant diseases.

Iowa, Utah, and Washington are among the states that have levied heavy taxes on butter substitutes. South Dakota has placed a 5 cent tax on vegetable shortening to shield its hog raisers.

Ban on Construction Materials.

The buy at home movement in numerous states has become embodied in laws prohibiting the use in state institutions or construction projects of materials from other states.

Arkansas has such a law. In Indiana state buildings must be heated with Indiana coal if the cost of that coal is not more than 10 per cent greater than competing coal from outside. Kansas has ordered that materials and supplies for all state educational, penal, or charitable institutions be purchased from Kansas concerns when their prices are equal to those of outlanders. Many of these laws have been passed since the first of this year.

This fostering of home industry works all right at first and it gets votes. But when everybody gets the same idea and the shut-out producers in other states start reprisals at home the immediate benefits disappear. There is a growing tendency to isolate state markets and force each producer to depend upon the volume of business that he can get near at hand.

Enacts Retaliatory Law.

Pennsylvania, for example, this year has enacted a retaliatory law which instructs various state departments not to use in public works materials from other states which have barred outside products in their own public works.

Railroad rates have been another means of building economic barricades along state lines. Under the Cashman law in Minnesota intrastate freight rates on a long list of commodities are somewhat lower than corresponding interstate rates. In Texas class rates are lower for goods moving within the state than for goods coming over the line.

Before recent general alterations in the freight rate structure throughout the country the first class rate on shipments within the state of Minnesota was 91¼ cents per hundred pounds for 300 miles. The intrastate rate in Wisconsin was 88 cents. But for interstate shipments of 300 miles between these states or between either and Michigan the rate was $1.40. The rates have been changed, but their relative position remains the same.

$100,000,000 Treasury Bill Offering Oversubscribed

Washington, Dec., 28.—(AP)—Acting Secretary Mills of the treasury announced tonight applications totaling $190,072,000 were received for the tender of $100,000,000 in 91 day treasury bills dated Dec. 30, 1931. The highest bid made was 59,550, equivalent to an annual interest rate of about 1.78 per cent, and the lowest bid accepted was 9.077. The total amount of bids accepted was $101,332,000.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 28.—Year-end tax selling was blamed for a rather shabby "day after" performance of the stock market today. Declines of 1 to 4 points occurred throughout the list, with most of the so-called pivotal issues like American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, American Can, and Westinghouse Electric registering new bear market minimums. United States Steel touched its old low of 36, but recovered fractionally in the last thirty minutes of trading.

Market conditions generally speaking remained unchanged by the long holiday. The few dividend announcements worthy of note continued the downward trend of this class of trade news, the foreign situation showed little modification, and the list of bank failures was no longer than it has been the last week or so. Congress, of course, was not on the job to furnish its quota of small time alarms.

Rails Trail Along.

Traders who make a habit of peering about the gloaming for signs in support of their never-say-die type of optimism were able to distill a gram or two of comfort from the earnings reports of three or four railroads which showed some improvement in the net for November over that of the corresponding month of last year.

However, they seemed to have little difficulty in holding their enthusiasm in leash and the rails trailed along toward the rear in step with other groups without benefit of earnings figures.

Center of Activity.

Activity centered chiefly in a dozen or so stocks of leadership rating, including U. S. Steel, American Telephone, American Can, Bethlehem Steel, Westinghouse, Consolidated Gas and Standard Oil of New Jersey. Westinghouse was under considerable pressure from the outset. Recent statistics revealing that this corporation has been earning less than its larger rival, General Electric, and the general knowledge that dividend payments are not always continued in the face of deficits in spite of the well known liberal dividend policy of the Westinghouse management was held responsible for much of the selling. The closing sale was at 23, as compared with 24 on December 24.

Motor, oil and mining shares drifted from a fraction to a point or so lower without attracting much activity. General Motors touched a new low for the major decline at 21¾.

Run Into Thin Markets.

Several issues of assorted description ran into thin markets, among them Keith-Albee preferred, which broke more than 8 points on two transactions; Auburn, which dropped 8 and later recovered a fourth of its loss; Coca Cola and Eastman, each of which fell 2 to 3 points, and Procter & Gamble, which dropped some 3 points to a new low—also later recovering a part of its early loss.

The tobacco group, which has been in distavor of late on account of state cigaret tax talk, pulled itself together in spite of the dilapidated condition of the general market, and the three American Tobacco issues closed a point or more each higher than on Saturday. Liggett & Myers also made fractional progress on the upside. The street heard that most of the recent selling of these stocks has been coming from a few of the larger holders.

Attempt Mild Rallies.

Two or three mild attempts to rally the market were made during the course of the day, one of them in the last few minutes, but about the only effect was to check the selling momentarily.

Turnover was around 1,900,000 shares, but owing to numerous transactions of 1,000 to 2,000 shares, it was much larger than its breadth and activity indicated on the surface.

PRICES OF WHEAT FLUCTUATE IN NARROW RANGE

Trade Proves Largely of Local Character.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat prices fluctuated in a meaningless manner yesterday within a range of ⅝@⅝c. Trade was largely of a local character, with the action of the stock market tending to create bearish sentiment, and there was nothing in the general run of the news to cause operators to take a decided stand on either side. At no time were prices above the finish of last Thursday, with the close at net losses of ⅝@⅝c. December was 53c, May 55⅝@55½c, and July 54⅝@54¾c.

The holiday feeling was as much in evidence abroad as it was in North American markets, and export sales of only 200,000 bu Manitobas were claimed during the day. Liverpool finished ¼d higher to ¼d lower, with the May quoted at 57¼c per bu on the basis of $3.42 for sterling, while Winnipeg was off ¼@⅜c, with May at 61⅝c in Canadian funds, the latter being quoted at 18⅜ per cent discount. Buenos Aires finished unchanged to ⅛c higher, with January at 42⅞c. Heavy rains fell in parts of Argentina over the holidays, and there is increased apprehension of damage to the quality of the new crop.

Italy Modifies Regulations.

Italy is apparently finding it increasingly difficult to take care of its requirements of durum wheat products from home grown grain, and for the second time in the last few weeks has modified milling regulations so that at the present time mills can grind 50 per cent of imported wheat, compared with 25 per cent previously.

Mild weather prevails over the winter wheat belt, and has for a number of days. Apprehension of crop damage is increasing owing to the crop having resumed growth over a wide area. Should there be a severe drop in temperatures, H. C. Donovan, the Logan & Bryan crop expert, expressed the belief there might be serious damage, such as was witnessed in 1928 east of the Mississippi river.

The wheat market has arrived at a stage where little change in prices for a week or so is anticipated by the trade in general. Despite the persistent decline in stocks, wheat is still well above the low point. No. 2 red sold down to 45c in August, and was around 10c above that figure at the finish yesterday. In the last 70 years there have been 19 times when the season's low was made during that month. Routine news seems to have little effect on the market, with the trade disposed to watch financial developments closely.

An increase of 558,000 bu was shown in the domestic visible supply of wheat, making the total 212,932,000 bu, against 158,109,000 bu last year.

Corn Has Narrow Range.

Corn prices held within a range of ⅝, with trade at a minimum and largely of a local character. Closing trades were unchanged to ⅜c lower, with the December showing the most strength, finishing at 35¼@35⅝c, while May was 40¼c and July 41½c. Country offerings were lighter, as bids to arrive were lowered in some instances ½c, while the shipping demand was very slow. An increase of 619,000 bu was shown in the visible supply, making the total 11,300,000 bu, against 15,451,000 bu last year. The Italian crop is officially estimated at 74,000,000 bu, compared with 111,000,000 bu last year.

Oats and rye were fractionally higher early, but reacted with other grains. Oats finished unchanged, with December 23¾c, May 25¼@25⅝c, and July 25c, while rye was ⅜c lower to ¼c higher, with May 44⅝ and July 45c.
